GOLDBERGS ARE GUILTY AT TEXTILE SCHOOL

They Broke Into a Jewelry Store In Boston

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—In the superior court today before Judge Ratigan a jury returned a verdict of guilty against Jacob and Joseph Goldbergs for breaking and entering the jewelry store of Sam Ullian on the night of Feb. 27, 1910, and the larceny of property at about $15,000. Soon after the crime the Goldbergs were arrested in New York but succeeded in having a small amount of bail fixed while waiting extradition and fled. At the cost of many thousands of dollars District Attorney Pelletier had the Goldbergs followed through Europe and Inspector Lynch spent many months in locating them. One was apprehended in Austria and the other in Russia and both were brought back to Boston several weeks ago.

Counsel for the defendants announced his intention of taking the case on exceptions to the full bench of the supreme judicial court, but under the statutes Judge Ratigan will shortly impose sentences, regardless of the exceptions.

Board of Trade Saw Much of Interest Last Evening

The members of the board of trade assembled in large numbers at the Lowell Textile school last evening to discuss the importance of the school and the importance of industrial education. The occasion being an inspection of the school and a meeting of the board held at the institution.

From 7 to 8:30 the members were escorted through the buildings by the instructors and members of the faculty after the meeting was opened in the school hall, Harvey J. Greene presiding. President Greene, after outlining the purpose of the meeting spoke on the importance of industrial education. He was much surprised at the attendance at the industrial schools and the interest taken in them and he stated that the mill agents were appreciative of the possibilities of industrial education.

Principal William H. Dooley of the industrial school was then called upon and he described in detail the methods employed in educational institutions similar to that of which he is the head. He said that the industrial school supplies the training which formerly came from the system of apprenticeship in the various factories. He stated that the condition existing today in industrial centers is due to the lack of competent skilled help. The industrial school aims to take the boy from 14 to 17 years of age and train him along industrial lines, and give him the benefit of a practical education in the many branches of employment.

The school is organized for the training of boys and girls for life activities and duties, and to give them a training in the branches of knowledge and trades that are most useful in gaining a livelihood. To meet those requirements, the industrial school offers courses for girls in housekeeping, dress making, millinery, power machine work and for boys a preliminary training in the following trades: Cabinet maker, machinist, mechanical drafter, electrician, engineer, automobile repairing, carpenter and architectural drafting.

Mr. Dooley said that Massachusetts felt that every boy was a valuable unit as an industrial factor, and was willing to provide education which would take care of the 25,000 idle boys in the state at the age of 14 to 16. The school provides day courses, evening courses and part courses, and is located at the Morrill school in Common street for girls, and in the old Bartlett school in Clark street for boys. The old Moody school is being equipped for preliminary textile training, which will serve the purpose of educating foreigners.

Mr. Dooley expressed the hope that the board of trade would assist him in every way and that the manufacturers would give him such information as would tend to make the school a permanent and very useful institution in the city of Lowell.

Principal Charles H. Bames of the Lowell Textile school was the next speaker. He spoke on the purpose of the Textile school and expressed the opinion that any school with similar aims must succeed. He quoted foreign visitors to the school as saying that it is the finest institution of its kind in the world. With reference to courses, he said that the same corps of instructors officiated at night as in the day, so that an equal chance was given to all for instruction. He extended an invitation to the Lowell board of trade to visit the school at any time the school was in session of the morning.

An address by A. G. Cummock, president of the Lowell Textile school, followed. Mr. Cummock emphasized the importance of skilled labor in the textile industry and spoke of the opportunities existing today for men properly educated in the textile business.

At the conclusion of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was tendered. During the business meeting an amendment to the constitution was adopted, providing for the membership of the boards of trade in surrounding towns.

An Enemy to Debility

GAINS GREAT FAVOR IN THIS CITY

That nervous debility finds its origin during one of those periods of overstrained and convulsive exertion, so common with those who are forced to endure the strain of modern city life, is the statement of one of the experts who are here explaining the nature of this modern plague and demonstrating the remarkable value of the new tonic, "Tona Vita."

"Debility," says this expert, "is that condition of the body or any of its organs in which the vital functions are discharged with less than normal vigor, the amount of power and activity displayed being reduced. It is simple, and the body is debilitated by its characteristic properties and combined with a high state of nervousness, the modern plague, nervous debility, is produced. The body is then in a state of languor and decline."

"The following symptoms are characteristic of this trouble: Lassitude, nervousness, sleeplessness, flimsiness, depression of spirits, poor digestion, stomach and bowel troubles, depression and despondency."

"These are unmistakable indications of nervous debility, and there are thousands here in Lowell, like all large cities, who suffer with this trouble in its most distressing form."

"Tona Vita" will act in such cases like a true specific. From the moment the medicine is taken, improvement is rapid.

"While we are meeting a great many callers each day and hundreds of debilitated people are regaining their health through our medicine, there are thousands more whom we want to reach before our stay in Lowell is over. If all the men and women who are struggling along, depressed in mind and body by nervous debility, made to get any real enjoyment out of living, would only take the trouble to come in and talk with us, we would bring a tremendous amount of happiness to the people of this city. There is little real pleasure in life for an individual who feels continually worn out. Positively the very first dose of our tonic benefits a man or woman in this condition."

The "Tona Vita" introductory sale is now being conducted at Hall & Lyon's drug store, where experts are always on hand to meet the public.

INTERESTING TALK

DELIVERED BY PRINCIPAL DOOLEY OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Principal Dooley in his address at the Textile school last night said: "I have visited practically all the textile schools in this country and in Europe, and I must confess there is not one that has better equipment or better facilities for providing the highest education in the textile arts than the Lowell Textile school. The state of Massachusetts, and the city of Lowell has a grand institution to dignify its leading industry."

"This institution, like most technical schools, aims to be of collegiate rank. That is, it provides the highest training in textile arts for students over sixteen or seventeen years of age, who have had a high school education, or its equivalent. Similar courses are provided evenings for those who have a grammar school education, or its equivalent. In other words, this splendid institution prepares the leaders of the great industrial army, employed in the textile industry of this country. It is doing its work well, and is doing this work better than ever before."

"The education received in this school is the highest possible training in textile arts. This education and training is often above the average mill operative and often exceeds the real educational needs of the prestions in the ordinary mill. Little if any effort is made by the present schools to supply textile education of a primary grade, that is a simpler textile education to the great mass of young people between fourteen and seventeen years of age, who desire a practical education and evening or part time instruction in the operatives in mills who desire instruction to meet their daily needs."

"The success of any great industry does not depend solely on the leaders but to a great extent on the non-commissioned officers and the privates. In fact, a great many people feel that real efficiency can only be obtained by educating the operators."

"What provisions are we making for the rank and file of the industrial

This is a material increase over last year's registration before state election, the total number one year ago was as follows: Ward one, 34; ward two, 10; ward three, 8; ward four, 15; ward 5, 15; ward six, 28; ward seven, 7; ward eight, 22; ward nine, 20.

Ward 8 Goes Back

The registration by wards yesterday was as follows: Ward one, 34; ward two, 10; ward three, 8; ward four, 15; ward five, 15; ward six, 28; ward seven, 7; ward eight, 22; ward nine, 20. Total, 15,111.

By these figures it will be seen that ward three is still the largest ward in voting population in this city with ward seven second and ward eight third. It is within a couple of years ward eight was the largest. Last year it held second place but this year ward seven passes it. Ward five is the smallest ward. Precinct 3 of ward seven, Pawtucketville, is the largest precinct in Lowell.

POSTAL SAVINGS

Bank to Open at Post Office Saturday

The postal savings bank will open in the money order office at the local post office Saturday morning and it remains to be seen whether the number of depositors will be large.

In conversation with a representative of The Sun this morning, Postmaster Legare said he hoped that the people of Lowell would make the most of the opportunity as he is anxious to establish a record for the number of depositors. Relative to whether or not it would be necessary to engage extra clerks to handle the new business, the postmaster said that for the present at least the regular force of clerks in the money order department would take care of the new work.

THE CARNEGIE HEROES LEAVES HIS FAMILY

Medals and Money for People Who Did Brave Acts

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 19.—Forty-seven bronze and 12 silver medals were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission at its fall meeting here yesterday, as a recognition of bravery in saving human life or in attempts in which the life of the rescuer was jeopardized. In addition to the medals to these 59 persons cash awards were made for reimbursing loss, for relieving debt on homes and the purchase of homes, for educational and other worthy purposes as needed, amounting to $54,025. Pensions to survivors amounting to $315 monthly were also issued, and for children left without support $5 a month was awarded each to the amount of $50 monthly.

Of the rescues one was saving a man from a wild animal. Thirteen of the heroes lost their lives.

Some of the awards follow:
James M. Snyder, bronze medal and $1000 for purchase of farm. Snyder, aged 51, a farm foreman, rescued Phann Hausman, aged 68, from a bison at Schencksville, Pa., March 3, 1911. The infuriated animal was attacking Hausman, when Snyder, at the risk of his life, threw his overcoat over the bison's head.

An Allston Hero

A silver medal and a pension of $10 a month to the widow of Alexander Fraser, also $5 a month additional for her daughter until she reaches the age of 16. Fraser, who was aged 46, and was a fireman, sustained fatal injuries trying to save Frank O. Stenberg, aged 28, a stationary engineer, at Allston, Mass., Jan. 16, 1907. Fraser entered an engine room filled with steam, which was escaping at 55 pounds pressure from an exploded engine. In search of Stenberg, who he thought was in the room. In about five minutes he came out of the room badly scalded. He was taken to the hospital, where he died the next morning. Stenberg had left the engine room before Fraser went in. A bronze medal and $1000 to Alexander Morton, Sr. The money is to liquidate the indebtedness of Morton and to be used for other worthy purposes as needed. Morton, who is aged 56 and is a miner, saved Louis Davidson, aged 30, a salesman, from drowning at Revere, Mass., Aug. 19, 1908. Morton, who was recovering from injuries received in a mine, swam 150 feet to Davidson, who had become distressed in water six feet deep. He was grasped by the shoulder and pulled under the surface. Upon coming up they were separated, and Morton shouted for help while he swam 20 feet with Davidson, who was half-conscious, and grasped the hand of a man who had waded out from shore. Morton and two men pulled Davidson to shallow water and to the beach where he revived.

Braved Death By Train

A bronze medal and $1000 to Louis J. Bruza, aged 36, a telegrapher, who saved George O. Perkins, aged 72, from being run over by a train at Montpelier, Vt., May 11, 1910. Dashing on the track ahead of an approaching train, Bruza caught Perkins, who was walking in the middle of the track with his back to the train and shoved him off the track, the train being but a few feet off when they cleared the rail.

A bronze medal and $1000 to Patrick H. Campbell, who is aged 27 and is a groundskeeper, saved Charles D. Stone, aged 41, an advertising agent, from drowning at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 27, 1909. Campbell, who was dressed and suffering from an ailment which made him short of breath and tired him quickly, went to the help of Stone, who became distressed in Lake Quinsigamond, 25 feet from shore in water 15 feet deep. Stone threw both arms around Campbell's neck and both went under, but came up in a minute, still clasped together, when Campbell caught a life preserver that had been thrown to him and both were pulled in shore.

Howard L. Davis, bronze medal and $1215 toward purchase of home. Davis was badly burned rescuing a child from a fire at West Haven, Conn., March 24, 1911.

Jersey Postmaster Starts Out to Seek a Fortune

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 19.—Herbert Keystone, who has conducted a small grocery and was postmaster at Emerson, six miles north of Hackensack, on the New Jersey & New York railroad, left home late Monday night, leaving a note for his wife to say he had gone to seek his fortune.

Under a handkerchief on the table Mrs. Keystone found three letters, one addressed "To My Wife" and the others to Mary, the oldest child, and Justice Angell.

The letter to Mrs. Keystone read as follows:
Dear Alice—My Dear, Dear Wife: Try and forgive me for the step I am going to take; but if I stay longer I will go crazy and might do something desperate. That everlasting worry for money drives me out of my mind. I have not enough capital to run a grocery business and this is such a town, besides.

I am going off trying to raise some money, and then we will have a home of our own and not depend on other people. Dear Alice, I think you will get along for a while. I left you all instructions about rent and interest. Try and sell as soon as possible. Do nothing, but take care of our children. Make them do their lessons. A good education is the best, and maybe the only thing we can give them.

Take good care of yourself for the children's sake, they only have you just now. I cannot write any more. Forgive your loving husband, Herbert.

"Hard luck seemed to follow my husband since we were married," said Mrs. Keystone. "He never drank nor smoked, and always worked hard for our three children and me. His feet business failed. Last summer the postoffice was robbed of $275, and he had to make that good. In July our horse was killed on the railroad, and a month later he ruined his store in Hillsdale. It was no wonder that he became despondent, but I wish he had taken me into his confidence." Justice Angell was left the combination of the safe, but it could not be opened, and until the federal inspector arrives it cannot be determined whether the accounts are all right. Keystone is 50 years old, and has been postmaster for two years. No one knows how he left Emerson. He took no extra clothes with him.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Mr. Chas. W. Collins, of the Chicago Inter Ocean, in reviewing a performance of "The Beauty Spot," which comes to the Opera House next Tuesday, Oct. 24, had this to say:

Even the excessive heat of an August theatre going should not prohibit one from becoming somewhat excited over "The Beauty Spot." Here is a musical entertainment with more excitement than the average. It is cleverly executed, amusing, melodious and colorful. In this day of frenzied frolics on the lyric stage it is a pleasure to see things so well done.

According to the current fashion it is called a "musical play," but it comes close to the line of legitimate comic opera and is fitted almost to that standard by an engaging score of Harold DeKoven's composition. The piece was disclosed Monday night at the Garrick theatre, where a large crowd assembled to sput the beauties. That duty was accomplished to everyone's satisfaction, and the other virtues of the production were received in an enthusiastic manner.

The musical numbers were beautiful, and all of them bright. Those entrusted to the principals were well managed, and the concerted and dancing selections were excellently staged. Particularly expert in technique were the ensembles, of which there are three. They justify this device of comic opera, which heretofore has been greatly abused by bunglers. The production is strong for beauty, and only in spots, but the ensemble, all its details the cast is good, and the handsome show girls insure a heavy seat sale for the front rows.

Buy a fan and see "The Beauty Spot." It is replete with entertainment and redundant of curves.

GERTRUDE RENNYSON

Thursday evening Nov. 17th is the date announced for the appearance here at the Opera House of the distinguished American soprano Gertrude Rennyson. Miss Rennyson, who numbers many Lowell friends among her admirers, has appeared with great success both as the leading soprano with the Henry W. Savage English Grand Opera Co. and at the leading theatres of Brussels, Vienna, Dresden and a season at Covent Garden and Bayreuth. In fact Miss Rennyson had the distinction of being the first American singer after Lillian Nordica to sing "Elsa" at Bayreuth.

"THE GAMBLERS"
One of the dramatic hits of the current Boston season is that of "The Gamblers," by Charles Klein, and with Jane Cowie and Orme Cuddehead heading the cast. "The Gamblers" comes to the Opera House immediately following the Boston engagement.

KEITH'S LOWELL THEATRE

And now comes to Lowell the greatest hit in modern vaudeville and the most interesting character on the American stage today, Mme. Sukimo, a real Japanese "nightingale," prima donna at the Imperial Opera house, Tokio, and the "Alba" of Japan, direct from her native land and appearing in America only on the Keith circuit. Columns could be written about the dainty prima donna who will delight the Lowell audiences next week for she is a wonderful woman. Her performance consists of singing in a carefully trained voice two English and two Japanese songs, and her presence on an accidental stage is something greater than a mere entertainment; it is a great moral lesson. What she has really done is something colossal, for she has mastered the English language and the European scale of music which is so strange and unmusical to the people of the Kingdom of the Rising Sun. There is to us, Mme. Sukimo was first drawn to European music when at high school she once heard a Japanese orchestra playing the Wagnerian operas. She then took up the study of harmony of the German and Italian operas, and states that the cultivated Japanese appreciate first the German and then the Italian. Mme. Sukimo adheres strictly to her native dress and insists on her attendants wearing it even off the stage. She appears on the stage in an exquisite Japanese setting. Her appearance has created great enthusiasm among the music loving public wherever she has appeared. Mme. Sukimo will head an exceptionally strong bill at the regular Keith prices.

HATHAWAY THEATRE

All who have witnessed a performance of "The Lost Paradise" at the Hathaway theatre this week agree that it is the best thing that the Donald Meek Stock company has done thus far. The play itself appeals to a Lowell audience more strongly than the ordinary dramatic offering for its scenes are laid in a New England factory town and it deals with the strife of capital and labor, introducing many situations with which Lowell working people are familiar. The play is being presented in a suitable manner by the Donald Meek Stock company

THEATRE VOYONS

Today the Theatre Voyons shows "At the Threshold of Life," a motion picture made by the Edison company in conjunction with the National Kindergarten society, and one of the most pleasing of this company's educational pictures. It tells a story full of interest and its lesson is a good one for anyone.

The big feature of the Theatre Voyons is the view of the battleship Maine as she looks today with the water drawn off, showing the destruction caused by the explosion of the mine and the ravages of the sea.

HEAVY SENTENCE

Imposed on Man Found Guilty of Larceny

Joseph Dupont was sentenced to nine months in jail by Judge Hudley in police court this morning after being found guilty of larceny. Sergt. Ryan arrested Dupont while trying to sell a suit of clothes in a rooming in Moody street Monday night and when booked at the police station the young man gave his name as John Riley. When examined by the inspectors he admitted having stolen the clothes and also admitted that he stole a bicycle. Dupont was arraigned before Judge Hudley Tuesday morning under the name of John Riley on a complaint charging him with the larceny of a bicycle and was found guilty but the imposing of sentence was deferred until this morning.

MERRIMACK SQUARE THEATRE

Once a patron of the Merrimack Square theatre always a patron. There's a reason, of course, for such a statement, and it is the excellence of the program provided by the management. There's variety to every weekly bill and all are up to the high standard of entertainment set at the outset. For this week Captain Pickard's troupe of trained sea lions presents a novelty that is hard to duplicate. These animals go through a series of wonderful plays such as juggling various objects, playing instruments and balancing articles on the tips of their noses. The training of these animals is no easy proposition and to have them go through their different stunts with apparent enjoyment reflects to the credit of their master, Captain Pickard.

"Mr. Remont," the best one-act play put on by Our Stock company, is winning many new friends and admirers for the members of the cast. The staging of the piece could hardly be improved on. Next week the company will present "A Member of Parliament."

Hammond and Forrester are first-class entertainers, and Freeman and Carr also share in the favorable recognition accorded the entire bill. Miss Beatrice Saville, in illustrated lectures, is not only entertaining but instructive as well. Friday night the Merrimack Square Theatre Concert orchestra will have selections from the opera "Faust." Box office telephone 303.

WHY MOST SHAMPOOS RUIN THE HAIR

We quote as follows from the Oakland Tribune, on "Care of the Hair," by Miss Martyn: "The reason for the recent, attractive tresses of most women lies in the persistent use of injurious shampoos. Few realize that soap shampoos do more harm than good. The deadly alkali in soap is too strong for the hair, causing it to break and become lifeless. Such shampoos can only result fatally to the hair. Dry powders also are bad, as they clog up the scalp pores and cause dandruff."

A perfectly safe shampoo is made by dissolving a teaspoonful of camphor in a cup of hot water. This cleanses perfectly, dries quickly without streaking, and leaves the hair bright, fluffy and easy to do up. It is the surest preventive of baldness ever discovered.

Has built up a successful dental practice in this city in little more than 1 year.

WHY?

THREE STRONG REASONS

1st—Absolutely Painless Dentistry—

I honestly believe that this is the strongest reason for my success. People come to me in fear and trembling and go away happy—wondering why they doubted.

2nd—The Lowest Prices consistent with good work. A set of teeth as low as $5. Gold crowns and bridges $3 to $5. Teeth without plate $3 to $5. Gold fillings $1; other fillings 50c.

3rd—Perfect Work Guaranteed—My painless perfect dental work causes patients to send their friends to me—the friends doing likewise. In this way I have built up a big practice. People can rely absolutely upon my work.

RUNNING FOR MAYOR

NEWPORT, WASH., WOMAN ANNOUNCES HER CANDIDACY

SEATTLE, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Clara A. Wright, wife of a rural mail carrier living at Newport, Wash., has caused consternation in the ranks of the politicians of that thriving city by filing as a candidate for mayor at the coming election on a citizens' ticket. She is being received on all sides with congratulations on her pluck. The politicians admit that her chances are excellent as the women voters are united on her election. She is only 25 years old, of prepossessing and winning appearance. She is the mother of three children and every minute she can spare from her home and her children is given to advancing the cause of women suffrage. She has announced that all appointive offices will be filled by women, even to the chief of police. She promises, if elected, to clean out Newport from top to bottom. She stopped making bread yesterday long enough to discuss her platform with a reporter, and when the interview was closed went back making bread. She refused to pose for a picture, saying there would be plenty of time for that when she is elected mayor.

CADDIE ASKS $10,000

Says Skull Was Broken With Golf Club

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—While holding an umbrella over the head of Joseph G. Jones on the golf links of the Commonwealth Country club, John E. Waters, a caddy, alleges he was hit on the head with a golf club by his employer and he seeks $10,000 damages for injuries. The case went to trial yesterday before Judge Dana and a jury in the superior court.

The plaintiff was 12 years old at the time of the accident, May 9, 1903. The defendant is in the insurance business. He lives in Brookline.

The plaintiff alleges that on the day mentioned part of his duty was to hold an open umbrella over the defendant to protect him from the rain while the defendant was playing golf. While thus engaged and in the exercise of due care, he alleges, he was hit on the head, causing a fracture of his skull and injuries of a permanent nature. He alleges the defendant was negligent in his conduct toward him.

BETTER CAR SERVICE

Hearing by R. R. Commission for Lowell and Tewksbury Petitions

The petition of the patrons of the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State Street Railway Co. for better service has resulted in the board of railroad commissioners granting the petitioners a hearing to be held at the office of the railroad commissioners at 20 Beacon street, in Boston, on Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Lawyer Melvin H. Rogers of this city, who is legal representative for the petitioners, received the following letter from the railroad commissioners this morning:

Boston, Oct. 18, 1911.
Melvin H. Rogers, Esq., 40 Hildreth Bldg., Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: From the petition of Ralph T. Leith and others relative to service on the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State Street Railway, the board will give a hearing at its office, 20 Beacon street, Boston, on Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1911, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon.

Very truly yours,
Charles E. Mann,
Chief of the Board.

There are six requests in the petition, one of the principal ones being the second, which provides that the Lowell-Tewksbury line be run without stop to Merrimack square at 5:15, 6:15 and 6:45 a. m., for Tewksbury to be run without stop to

Oakland square (corner of Rogers and Boylston streets) except to take on passengers. In speaking with one of the petitioners the reporter learned that people who could take an Andover street or Oakland car crowd onto the already packed Boston car and on many occasions people who live away from Rogers street or in Tewksbury have to wait half an hour for another car. Springfield some of the cars running to the suburban towns are marked "Limited" and will not stop to "drop" passengers until a certain point is reached.

The petition is as follows:
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Board of Railroad Commissioners.
Petition of Ralph T. Leith and others in the matter of the service of the Bay State Street Railway company.
To the Honorable Board of Railroad Commissioners, Boston, Mass.

The undersigned, patrons of the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State Street Railway, petition your honorable board to make the following orders in regard to the service and transfer

REFUGEES FROM TRIPOLI MET PRIVATIONS AFTER THEY HAD FLED TO OTHER CITIES

SYRACUSE, Sicily, Oct. 18. When Italy prepared to bombard Tripoli the residents of that city hurried away in every possible direction. Hundreds went to Malta, while other hundreds came to this city. There were so many of them that it was impossible to provide shelter for them. They were allowed 2 francs (16 cents) daily to buy food until they could be sent back to Tripoli. These payments were made at the police station. The picture shows a group of refugees last after they had received their allowance. These refugees were of all nationalities: German, Italian, Turkish, etc. No distinction was made, and all received the same amount. Another picture shows the Italian destroyer Corazziere, which took part in the operations at Pevea. So many Italian soldiers were sent here that the barracks could not accommodate them, and many slept in churches and doorways.

THE OPPONENTS OF TOBACCO TRUST PLAN ARE BECOMING ACTIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 12. Although the United States court will not hear objections to the American Tobacco Co.'s plan of reorganization until Oct. 30th the opponents of this plan are holding conferences every day and arranging to present a united front. In financial circles the determination of the legal departments of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina to protest against the impending plan is the most important development in the controversy. The attorneys general of these states, which constitute the "tobacco belt," conferred recently as to the form of this protest.

The position of Attorney General Wickersham has not yet been announced and the stand he may take is the most interesting point to be revealed at the coming hearing. The tobacco trades most here this afternoon to discuss the situation.

What the College Teams Are Doing

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 18.—Rain and a muddy, slippery field bothered Harvard not at all Tuesday afternoon, the players not even going to the cage for signal drill. The blackboard session was specially long, and so was the work on plays in the stadium. Corbett working out two sets of backs before the varsity was sent into a scrimmage against the second team.

The freshman team at Harvard this fall looks like a dandy, but the boys were nervous against the regulars. However, with the bad footing and the slippery ball the regulars were able to score on the freshmen only once, the one touchdown being scored by Ted Smith, who running from his position, slid around the freshman's right wing for 20 yards. The freshman attack made little headway, their only brilliant play being made by Hildegar, who intercepted a forward pass that Foster was making to Smith, and running from his own 20 yard line sent the middle of the field. A kick then sent the varsity back to its 10 yard line, from where Foster, standing under the goal, got away a 50 yard kick. Gardner recovered the ball when it tumbled to the freshmen.

Capt. Fisher was on the field Tuesday, but not allowed to play. He lost his knee Saturday and was worried a bit Monday although he worked. Tuesday the scare was over and Fisher was back in the lineup yesterday. Fisher has played football 16 years at school and college and never has been taken out of the game because of an injury. Yesterday H. Kersing, a former varsity guard, who coached two years ago under Houghton, will begin a two weeks' session at Cambridge as coach for the guards. Capt. Fisher is looking for more line material and has Jim Wray's consent to take Goodrich, who will lead the freshmen crew last year and who played on the freshman line last fall.

THE YALE ELEVEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 18.—There were many shifts in the Yale lineup Tuesday, shifts which are expected to hold for some time. The coaches walked until Paul had come back to scrimmage before they made them. Then they put Paul in at his old tackle position, shifted Francis from guard to end, put Childs in at guard and Cooney in at center. Freeman, who has been doing well at halfback on the senior team, was put at halfback on the varsity Tuesday. Kelly and Anderson being the other backs, with Spalding in for a little while. Merritt played through the scrimmage at quarterback, while Capt. Howe followed the team with the coaches.

Childs, at varsity guard Tuesday for the first time, played a hard game and no one got through him. When the varsity had the ball he proved a very aggressive guard. Francis did well at end and Avery, who was at the other end, didn't let anyone get through him. The only scoring in the scrimmage was done by Freeman, who made a touchdown.

Thomas L. St. Germain, the Indian player, arrived in New Haven Tuesday and is eligible for the Yale team. He helped coach last year. He played in the line in a western college some years ago. He has been in the employ of the government recently. Phillips was in the signal drill at halfback Tuesday and will probably play that position again at West Point, as his shoulder is getting better. The coaches at the field Tuesday were Walter Camp, Jack Field, Buck Morris, Arthur

Bridges, Earl O. Kistler, Dewitt Cockran, Ted Lilley, Phil Smith, Dr. William J. Bull, Paul Veder and Charles Chadwick.

AT CORNELL

ITHACA, Oct. 18. The process of strengthening the Cornell football team Tuesday took the form of a redivision of the Reds and Blues, as the varsity and scrubs are known. Half a dozen first string varsity men were put over on the Blues, and this eleven was strong enough as a consequence to beat the varsity in the scrimmage by two touchdowns to one. In addition to Munns, who has been playing right guard; Williamson, a sub tackle, and Fritz, one of the ends, the scrubs had the services of a good many leaders of the varsity back field, including Butler, Collins, McCormick and Underhill. On the Red team Lyle and Stinson played ends; Kersing and Champlain tackled; DeChane, the old varsity man who has not been in the first lineup in two weeks, and Widenoth, who has been a sub all season, guards; White center Smith; quarterback, O'Connor and Hawkin halfbacks; and Goss, another sub, fullback. Goss was not brought out into the varsity lineup until very late in the day. Another varsity man who was "there" Tuesday was O'Connor, at left half. He carried the ball in most of the varsity games, was fast and sure and his dodging was clever. The interference of the backs on both teams was better than usual.

O'Connor scored the first touchdowns of the game by an end run after the Reds had gained through the Blue line for a number of plays. To show that he was getting back his form Butler took the ball on a quarterback run around Stinson for the second touchdown after Collins' line flashes had given him a good chance. One of the best outside kicks of the year gave Fritz a chance for a fifty yard run and a second touchdown for the Blues.

COACH SAVAGE PLEASED

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 18.—Coach Savage was visibly pleased with the performance of Gen. Miles, '12, in the Amherst football Tuesday. With the scrubs the freshmen crew last year and who played on the freshman line last fall.

THE NAVY PLAYERS

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—Rather than take any chances of not having its full strength for the final game against the Army team the Navy coaches will have the eleven enter the game against Princeton next Saturday with Capt. Dalton and his tackles Brown and Davis. None of the three was in the game either Monday or Tuesday, and though it is hoped that they will be in shape for the big local contest no chances of losing the game against Princeton are being taken. Rodman is playing a strong game at right tackle. Davis' old place, but Leonard cannot do the line backing work of Dalton, nor can Dalton fill Big Brown's place acceptably. All three of the players are suffering with bad legs. Ingram played in Weems' place at center Tuesday afternoon.

AT WEST POINT

WEST POINT, Oct. 18. The rain Tuesday caused drill to be dispensed with and the coaches seized upon the extra time and contrary to the usual program drove the men through a long scrimmage until it was so dark the players were hardly visible. The first line was unable to cross the scrubs' line, nor could the big line gain consistently for any great length against the strong defense of the second string. There were flashes of brilliant individual playing, both Dean and Hyatt doing some good gaining in running back punts. The defense of the varsity was strong and Arnold and Devore both stopped plays before they could get started. The forward pass was tried repeatedly, but without any successful pass during the afternoon. Hyatt was replaced by Keyes at quarterback and made two drop kicks. One from the 40 yard line just missed the goal and the other from the 35 yard line fell short.

WORTHEN ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

The members of the Worthen Street Baptist church held their first special of the season last night in the vestry of the church. A supper was served at 6.30 and the following entertainment program was given: Readings, Miss Helen Mansfield, Masters Harry and Harold Merrill, and songs by William Mansfield and J. A. Stevens, accompanied by Carl Mason. The new president of the Ladies' Social Circle, Mrs. George Snow, was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Fanny Mrs. Barker, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Myers, Mrs. Nutting, Mrs. Houghton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Dunn.

HERE'S THE MAN WHOSE HOME RUNS BEAT GIANTS TWO GAMES IN THE WORLD'S SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 18.—J. Franklin Baker, the Athletics' third baseman, whose home run drives in the second and third games of the world's series were each instrumental in the Giants' defeat, is a product of the eastern shore of Maryland, hailing from Trappe, Talbot county. He was born in 1886 and is nearly six feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He has batted upon one day to cover third base. His performance was such a notable one that Baker never again entered the pitcher's box. He was gathered in by the Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern league, but was dissatisfied with his berth and quit. Frank returned to his home on the Chesapeake and later became a member of the Reading (Pa.) team of the Tri-State league. It was while playing for Reading that he made his reputation as being the best third sacker and hitter in that league. Manager Mack got on the job and the rest of the story is familiar to all followers of the national sport.

HAWKINS ASSAULTED

He Was Held Up by Two Men Near Hood Farm

Joseph Hawkins, a driver and collector for the Gulf Refining company, was held up and assaulted by two men on the river road near Hood farm late yesterday afternoon and undoubtedly would have been robbed if it had not been for the fact that an approaching wagon frightened the men away. The local police were notified but inasmuch as it is out of the jurisdiction of the local department all that could be done was to inform the members of the department to be on the lookout for two suspicious characters and notify the police of neighboring cities and towns. Hawkins' regular route includes trips to Lawrence, and yesterday he went to the down-river city and made collections and had considerable money on his person when he left that city. He was driving his horse slowly along the road when upon reaching a point near Hood farm he saw two men standing in the middle of the road. They stopped him and one asked how far it was to Lawrence. Hawkins informed him and then the other man approached and asked the distance to Lowell. But before Hawkins could answer he was seized by the leg and dragged from his seat. The two thugs bent Hawkins over the wheel of his wagon, but before they could get hold of his money he swung the whip which he still held in his hand and knocked one of the culprits down. Hawkins then struggled with the other man when an approaching team scared the two men away.

They ran down the river road, while Hawkins drove to Hood farm and telephoned to the Lowell police.

HARVEST SUPPER

The annual harvest supper at the Kirk Street Congregational church was held last evening with a good attendance. The menu was exquisite and the Victoria program which followed the feast was well enjoyed. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Howard W. Foster and a committee.

MATRIMONIAL

The marriage of Mr. John F. Conley, a shoe manufacturer of Avon, and Miss Nellie G. Moran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Moran, of 755 Bridge street, was solemnized at 5 o'clock last night at the parochial residence of St. Michael's church, Rev. John J. Shaw officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Rita Moran, and was attired in a white satin gown with a white overdress of duchess lace, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore a pink messaline gown with an overdress of pink chiffon, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. M. Conley, a brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man, and the ushers were Henry Watson, Joseph O'Connor, Esq., and Dr. Joseph Kearney of Lowell; Mr. John Shanahan of Lynn; Mr. Morris J. Shaw of Haverhill, and Mr. Frank Conley, a brother of the groom, from Dorchester.

After the ceremony, the party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was tendered them, among the guests being some from Boston, Brockton, Avon and Randolph, Mass., Lewiston and Gardiner, Me. She was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Connee, who wore a white dress and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man was Mr. J. J. Galey of this city.

The young couple were tendered a fine reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Connee, the latter a sister of the bride, 16 June street, where also a dining room supper was served to a large number of guests. The happy couple left on the 9:25 o'clock train for New York, where they will sojourn two weeks. After Nov. 1, they will be at home to their friends at 172 Pleasant street.

A wedding supper was afterwards served at the home of the bride's mother, 74 Ludlum st., at which many out-of-town guests from Andover, Lawrence and New York city were present. SUES FOR $10,000

Woman Was Struck by an Automobile

BOSTON, Oct. 18.—Clairmont $10,000 damages. Mrs. Anna Robertson, formerly of Portland, Me., who was struck and seriously injured by an automobile belonging to Miss Commission R. Dale on Sept. 23, 1910, has brought suit in the Suffolk superior court against the commissioner and his chauffeur, William J. Connell.

Interesting legal questions are involved in this case in view of the fact that the city is liable for an accident caused by any of its fire apparatus. If the plaintiff should recover a judgment against Connell, the chauffeur, or the claim be settled by him, the city could legally reimburse him for any amount which the fire commissioner would recommend.

Another question arises as to whether the fire commissioner is a member of the fire department. The plaintiff claims that if he is a member of the department, any judgment against him can be reimbursed on his own recommendation, and that if he is not a member of the department while responding to a second alarm of fire, he is personally liable for an accident caused by his machine.

It is thought that this is the first case brought to court in recent years where an effort is made to hold the head of a department or a member of the fire department for injuries caused by any of the apparatus of the department.

Miss Robertson, the plaintiff, was in the City hospital from September until the following March. Upon leaving the hospital a bill for $507.83 was sent her by the city of Boston. She paid this bill and now seeks to recover her expenses and other damages caused by suffering and loss of earnings. She was employed as a stenographer in the office of a State street broker at the time of her accident.

The supreme court has sustained the regulation of the Boston and Maine railroad, excluding dogs from passenger cars but providing for their transportation in the baggage cars on payment of fare. Any other regulation would be wrong and even dangerous to the traveling public.

The elimination of chicken from the rations of the American soldier and the limitation of turkey to Thanksgiving and Christmas will effect a saving of $52,000. These changes can be made without detriment to the soldier for it is almost a certainty that the chicken supplied to the army is of the cold storage kind.

THE WATER BOARD

The board of aldermen is right in taking the water board to task for the inferior quality of the water furnished to the city. The people have borne with the disagreeable conditions long enough and want to know what is to be done to provide a pure water supply. The city is paying for good water but it is not getting it. It is, therefore, in order to have the water board tell why this state of affairs has been allowed to continue so long or what is to be done to correct it in the shortest possible time.

THE USUAL RESULT

The death of an eight-year-old boy at Saco, Me., Tuesday, as a result of the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a boy of fifteen, is another object lesson in the foolishness of allowing boys to handle shot-guns or even revolvers. The boy who shot the other is heart-broken of course, but that does not mend matters. The thing is to prevent such accidents, and it can be done only by forbidding boys to handle dangerous weapons. That is the one precaution that is not taken until after the shooting occurs.

LANGTRY WOULD RETAIN THE MACHINE

Secretary of State Langtry, being a machine politician, is, therefore, opposed to the abolition of party machines as proposed under the new charter. It was Langtry who got the state into such a ridiculous mess through errors in the official ballot in the state primaries. He is one of those men who while mismanaging his own affairs presumes to be able to tell other people all about their business. He is a part of the republican machine and evidently has some apprehension that under the new form of city charter which eliminates the party designations, he would lose his pull. That is another argument in favor of the new charter.

FOR VOTING MACHINES

At the state election the citizens of Massachusetts will have to vote upon the question whether or not they favor the adoption of voting machines. If the machines are capable of correctly counting ballots and registering the number of votes, then by all means they should be adopted. The state of affairs shown in the recent Maine election is an indication that present methods are very unreliable. With voting machines we believe the count would be more quickly and more accurately made. It would be much easier to detect an error in the work of a machine than in that of an incompetent counter. The time is not far distant when every polling booth will have its voting machine to do the counting.

THE SCHOOL FRATERNITIES

The secret wedding of two pupils of the Brockton high school has caused quite a sensation in that city. The contracting parties have been members of secret fraternities connected with the school, and this result furnishes another proof of the danger of such societies in connection with high schools. The young couple, it is said, had been sweethearts since childhood, but it seems that their attendance at the high school gave them an opportunity to be together, and the fact that they were married six months before their secret leaked out, shows how little the parents and teachers know about what is going on among the pupils. The high schools that have abolished the fraternities have cast off a fruitful source of demoralization in many directions.

THE CAMPAIGN

The republicans have been in the heat of their campaign for the past two weeks, but Governor Foss has not yet started on his campaign tour. We are informed that from next Saturday until the polls close, there will be something doing on the democratic end.

The burden of the republican tale of woe is foreign to this state. It is a cry of coming calamity unless the republican trusts are protected by the present high tariff. Governor Foss will deal with state issues. He will show wherein the state has been benefited by his administration; he will point out what he has accomplished in one year despite republican opposition, and he will show what he will accomplish in another year if retained at the helm of the ship of state. He has done much for the metropolitan district in securing better transportation facilities through an extension of tunnels, subways and the consolidation of the West End and Boston Elevated roads. Most of the important acts of the legislature for the present year were adopted through his initiative and recommended in his inaugural address. All these measures were signed by Governor Foss, whereas many of them were opposed by Mr. Frothingham, the republican candidate. Mr. Frothingham's record is a negative one. He voted against progressive measures brought forward by other men, but he has not shown the originality or the constructive ability to produce any important measure himself.

Governor Foss is a progressive candidate, and he stands upon a progressive platform, whereas Frothingham represents the unprogressive element or the standpat policy in the republican party. While he lacks the ability that a candidate for governor should possess, he has repeatedly taken a stand against popular measures that are now on the statute books. From Foss to Frothingham would be to exchange a policy of progress for one of retrogression and the support of every combination that seeks to accumulate wealth through special privilege and the plunder of the people.

SEEN AND HEARD

The new room for Poles, in the Greenhalge evening school, the first to be established is averaging about 30 pupils and the teachers speak highly of their new class of pupils. The Polish pupils, it seems, unlike some of the others, give considerable care to their personal appearance before attending evening school and appear at school "all dressed up," though to do so they must have to hustle as most of them work in the mills until nearly six at night, while the evening schools open at 7. They are anxious to learn and are correspondingly quick to learn.

How small the world is after all. A certain Lowell man who is attending the world's series entered the Polo grounds amid a crush of strangers Tuesday, never expecting to see a familiar face amid the moving multitude. He had hardly got inside when he beheld another Lowell man and a friend of his perched high up on the bleachers waiting for the fun to start.

"Touching" candidates is likely to become a lost art under the new election laws. Even if a candidate were disposed to take kindly to a "touch" he will hardly dare take a chance. It will be a rough blow to the professional "touchers" who thrive at this time of year.

When a woman loves a man, she will do anything for him. When she doesn't, a pair of oxen couldn't get her to do the right thing—that is what the man thinks is right.

How hankly some people get when they think they are being fooled. They want the earth with chaff over silk, and the grave lined with white cloth.

Men should not be blamed for everything. The woman who forgets the man to whom she has pledged her affection, must do the fool thing. A woman can be just as fast as any man living—but then, one expects too much from a woman anyway, and her slips appear more monstrous.

If some women's hair were as pretty as their voices, they could sweep the piano, the Sutherland sisters wouldn't be in it for a minute.

When a man has half a keg of beer sleeping around in his stomach, he generally has a kick against the city for building the curbstones so high.

One of the great events in the life of a young girl is when she has her first sweater. Cleopatra on her barge, with a green striped duck canopy, was never half so proud.

The man who hustles when it comes time to shake the furnace had noble ancestors at the pass of Thermopylae.

But water bottles are good bedfellows. They don't take up all the room, don't talk back, don't snore and keep right on working. They are fine company for cold feet.

But how about it in the cold, gray dawn of the morning after? Ah, there's the rub! For what may be a warm comfort in the early watches of the night, may be, nay is, a cold and clammy thing to be kicked out of bed without fear or remorse long before the coming of dawn. There's the consideration that must give us pause. The hot water bottle undoubtedly has its place in the economy of modern civilization, but the victim of the habit.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

No. Adams Express: The war against the sale of bad eggs in New York to the bakers is being waged by the department of health of that city. In one bakeshop three and one-half cans of liquid eggs with partially hatched chickens were found. As a result of the investigation by the board of health of New York city sixteen cases will appear on the sanitary calendar of the court of special sessions.

People who patronize bakeshops cannot be too vigilant in trying to find out what kind of food they are buying. Pure and well cooked food is essential to the health of all, but when rotten eggs are used in baking the food the health of all those who eat it is in jeopardy. Not only in New York city but in every city in the country the boards of health should make a thorough inspection of all bakeshops to see if they are conforming to the laws of cleanliness and are using pure ingredients for their cookery.

HARRING THE AFFINITIES

Newport News: Judge Orr of the district court at Reno, Nev., deserves the praise of the entire country on account of his declaration that when it becomes known to the court that the plaintiff in a divorce action has an "affinity" he will refuse to act in the case. It is estimated that of the number of applicants for divorce going to Reno from outside the state, fully six per cent, are city accompanied by affiliates, with whom they spend much of their time during the average of eight months there, or have affiliates waiting elsewhere. The increasing number of such cases, as well as of re-marrriages within a few hours following the granting of decrees, has been recognized by the courts, but hitherto there has been little attempt to stop the practice.

TAFT AND THE NOMINATION

Johnstown Democrat: We take nothing back regarding the point that Mr. Taft was not the popular choice for the republican nomination in that year and that he was literally jammed through by the power of the Roosevelt administration. The great vote which he actually polled in the election was a tribute to the Roosevelt prestige rather than any distinct triumph for Mr. Taft himself.

The situation is very different in 1911. Three years ago there was no well defined split in the republican party. It was not then engaged in an internal struggle such as that now raging between insurgent and staid-patter. Mr. Taft had not then been tried out. He had not then chosen to consort with the Aldriches, the Smoots and the Tafts. He had not then called a fullingier, a Wilcoxman and a Wilson into his cabinet. He had not then elevated a Justice White over a Justice Harlan to the chief justiceship of the supreme court. Nor had he then packed that great tribunal in favor of "treasonable" interpretation of the Sherman law against the trusts.

KILLED BY A TRAIN

Flagman at Littleton Victim of Accident

A sad accident occurred yesterday in Littleton, when James McMillan was crushed to death by a train. The unfortunate man was flagman at Priest's crossing, and while standing on the east-bound track, flagging a west-bound train, he was struck by a Boston bound train, which it is presumed he did not see coming. Death was instantaneous.

The deceased was about 75 years old and leaves to mourn his loss three sisters, Mary of Littleton with whom he lived, Kate of South Framingham, Bridget of Marlboro; two brothers, Patrick, gate-tender at Littleton station and William of Marlboro. He had been in the employ of the company for a number of years, and strange to say he met his doom at the same place and same manner as his predecessor a few years ago.

BOARDS OF HEALTH

CANNOT COMPEL DEALERS TO KEEP FRUIT COVERED

SALEM, Oct. 19.—In the superior criminal court yesterday afternoon, Judge Brown ruled that boards of health in Massachusetts have no power to compel dealers to keep fruit covered from dust when exposed for sale.

The case was that of John Panagakis of Lynn, who was charged with violation of the rule of the board of health of Lynn requiring him to keep fruit covered from the dust when offered for sale.

The case, which was submitted to the court on an agreed statement of facts, was carefully considered. The court ruled that boards of health had no power to make a law for such regulations, and that on the acts submitted no offence had been committed. A motion to quash the complaint was allowed.

The decision is of widespread interest, as many fruit dealers, especially Essex county, have been obliged during the past year to keep fruit covered with sawdust or cellophane to the expense of keeping electric fans.

LOWELL POLICEMAN

Addressed the State Police Association

SALEM, Oct. 19.—Crowned with success in increased membership the past 12 months and a more satisfactory condition of finances than ever before, the 11th annual convention of the Massachusetts Police Association opened in Franklin hall at 2 yesterday afternoon. Frank J. Flaherty, president of the organization, presided.

The membership is now 1884, an increase of 82 since the preceding convention. The general fund now aggregates $8000. During the past year the club and mutual aid division paid out $3000 in sick and death benefits. The latter fund now amounts to $3500. Owing to the weather the outings planned for yesterday afternoon were abandoned.

At the convention yesterday 128 delegates were present from branch associations representing every city in the commonwealth except Boston, many towns and the Metropolitan and Massachusetts district police. Last evening the delegates and invised guests were rendered a banquet in Franklin hall.

John B. Skinner, assistant city marshal, and chairman of the reception committee, called the banquet to order and introduced William A. Wilson, president of the Salem association, as toastmaster.

Addresses were made by Mayor Adams, Bernard H. Flaherty of Fitchburg, president of the State Association; Judge Sears of the First District court; James M. Kearney of Cambridge, secretary of the association; Chief of Police Grady of Peabody; Alderman Schneider of Salem and Edward F. Flanagan of Lowell.

A LOWELL FIREMAN

Addressed Convention of the State Association

One of the most interesting addresses made last night was that on "Bills Introduced in the Legislature of 1911 and Laws Affecting Firemen" by Capt. James F. McKissock, of Truck 4 of the Lowell fire department.

This address was, in part, as follows:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Massachusetts State Firemen's Association:—This topic that is annually assigned me of presenting for your consideration the legislative work of each year seems to broaden out and take in everything that relates to the protection of life and property. Therefore, any measure that affects the police has to bear quite importantly upon the fire department as well. Perhaps, if I were to take only the bills that become laws, it would materially shorten up the scope of a document of this kind, but it would leave you without any knowledge of what is actually going on and yet there are so many bills introduced that have for their purpose the same thing, some acting for a municipality or town alone and others having a broader scope and taking in all the fire departments of the state, so that this year, if every bill that was introduced affecting life and property were to be made a part of my paper, I would have more material as large as the last annual report if any comment whatever was made upon them.

I have selected those that finally have received the attention of the committee and have brought them here and will ask your attention while we consider their merits and their value to the departments as a whole or those that they were intended specially to benefit.

CAPT. J. F. MCKISSOCK.

In order to make my point clear in this paper I have had to take the facts as they appear from the records, but I offer no criticism or have no feeling for either the police or other departments of the service who have secured these privileges and favors from the public. I merely use these to emphasize that the firemen themselves are to blame for the lack of effort on the part of the members of the legislature to give them the laws they have asked for.

Lack of Organization

Before taking the matter up I want to call your attention to the lack of organization or the lack of a concrete sentiment among firemen of the state of Massachusetts and if words of mine can impress anything upon your minds I wish that I might be able today to impress you with the absolute need of having some new method adopted that will bring matters which you desire to have enacted into laws, before the legislature in a concrete form and on one end and away with the present methods of interesting legislation. Either because of the lack of knowledge on the part of the members of the state of the lack of inclination to take hold of any matter together, we have no influence, no weight, and consequently lack the power to put upon the statute book any important remedial legislation whatever.

The other arm of the public service, whose purpose is the protection of life and property, are far and away beyond us in their knowledge of the needs and of the means required to secure those laws that will make their service as easy and efficient as it is possible and at the same time secure to them all the benefits that, in their opinion, they are entitled to, as well as the benefits to the widows and orphans of those who are killed or die from injuries received in the discharge of their duties and to those who from age or from physical disability are no longer qualified for further useful service. If you talk with the people who are familiar with the methods employed to secure the enactment of laws of this kind and ask why fire departments were not incorporated in the acts, they will turn you off with the reply "Oh, what's the use? Your men don't understand. Some of you want it and more of you don't," and there you are, Pension acts for the police department, acts relative to vacations for police departments, which comprehend one day in fifteen, while they practically come within the provisions of the eight-hour law, are all secured for them by mandatory enactment and are submitted to the city council or the selection of the town for their adoption only, before they become a law. Isn't it apparent from this point that if the firemen of the state of Massachusetts want any legislation that must be enacted before certain things that they believe they are entitled to, that they must get together and make it a committee with full power to consider all acts or all bills that are going to be introduced or that they are instructed to frame bills to accomplish the purpose desired and have full charge of the matter with power to call for assistance from any of the firemen of the state without question, and embody what is necessary to introduce and to get the legislation asked for.

Uniformity of Salaries

It has come to my notice during the past year that there is a lack of uniformity in the salaries received by firemen throughout the state and in the way of time, as figured in different places or different departments. For instance, a department gives so many days off and so much vacation each year to their men, but at other times, unless when laid off by injuries received in the performance of their duty, going to work at or returning from a fire, they have to lose their time. This is deducted for as small a space of time as thirty minutes and 1-48 of a day's pay is deducted therefrom. It seems to me that this is a most flagrant injustice, because a fireman of the permanent force of any city or town has to give his twenty-four hours for a day. He hasn't any more time to sell and therefore cannot get any extra pay for any service that he may render. In every other arm of the public service eight hours constitutes a day's work. If a man works any extra, he gets time and a half. In my city this year the city council granted the city laborers a half-holiday each day during the summer season with a full week's pay. The legislature of two years ago granted the police of any city other than Boston one day off in fifteen together with the annual vacation. The bill this year was referred to the city council for its acceptance. The police officers come within the provisions of the eight-hour law as well as the other laborers of the several departments of the public service and they have vacations and the days off given them without loss of pay.

A few cities in the state grant firemen one day off in five. Most of them are one day in ten; a few one day in eight. Think of it! Two days a month for men who work eight hours per day and the annual vacation, that is, one day out of eight, or at the outside one day in five in very few cases, and the annual vacation without loss of pay for men who work twenty-four hours a day and if you can show me the justice in this, I will stop talking. I do not believe any municipality has any right to dock a fireman who is on duty twenty-four hours a day, for any time off that the head of the department may see fit to give him and I must say that I have seen a man who gives his full time to the service of his city can contract any disease or sickness or injury that is not contracted in the performance of his duty, that is, if he is a faithful man and sticks to his duty. If he is not, he ought not to be there. I want you to have an opportunity to read the report of the convention of 1911 and consider whether it would not be better for us to get together and stand together for justice and for right and keep standing in the name of justice until justice is done.

Legislation Passed

To take up the consideration of bills that did receive notice from the legislative committee to which they were assigned I now invite your attention to Chapter 39.

This is the only piece of legislation that the Massachusetts State Firemen's association introduced and this amendment was passed simply because the legislature admired the conservative way in which the Massachusetts State Firemen's association was going about to amend this act. Should this prove that our prediction is right, haven't any doubt that in another year, we will be able to include "exercising horses," for instance, in the bill as well. As a result of this bill we made application to the board of commissioners of the $15,000 relief fund and had the child of Mr. A. L. Brackett, who was killed in Haverhill during the latter exercise, placed upon that fund.

Chapter 39

Section 1. Section seventy-three of chapter thirty-two of the Revised Laws, as amended by chapter two hundred and fifty-three of the acts of the year nineteen hundred and three, is hereby further amended by inserting after the word "same," in the fifth line, the following:— or while engaged in company drills, when such drills are ordered by the chief, acting chief or board of engineers of the fire department, or required by city or town ordinance or by law, so as to read as follows:—

Section 73. Such fund shall be used for the relief of firemen, whether members of said association or not, who are injured or disabled in the performance of their duty at a fire or in going to or returning from the same, or while engaged in company drills, when such drills are ordered by the chief, acting chief or board of engineers of the fire department, or required by city or town ordinance or by law, and for the relief of widows and children of the firemen killed in the performance of such duty, in the manner and to the amount determined by a board of five persons, of whom three, not members of said association, shall be appointed by the governor in July of the year nineteen hundred and three, and one for each year thereafter, and one shall be appointed by said association in such manner as it may from time to time determine.

Section 2. This act shall take effect upon its passage. (Approved March 2, 1911.)

In the Acts and Resolves of 1911 this act is indexed wrong. It will be found on page 54 and is known as chapter 39 as above mentioned.

Height of Firemen

Capt. McKissock then went on to discuss the various bills which have been presented to the legislature this year. The first taken up was House bill No. 442, bill accompanying the petition of John D. Connors for legislation relative to the height of firemen in the city of Boston.

"I am not going to say much about the qualifications of this bill, because I am under the height that is already prescribed for the city of Boston, which is five feet, seven inches and I am five feet, five and one-half inches. I believe it is up to you to form your own opinion, but after you have done so, I want to give you a few facts. The weight of individual conclusions, somebody is going to have the last guess and their guess is going to be final, whether it is the civil service commission, the fire commissioner or the city council. The legislature finally passed the bill at any rate by enactment of Chapter 352, which gives the city council the power to amend or to change the height of firemen of the city of Boston. The weight of the bill is five feet, seven inches and the weight of persons who shall be eligible to become members of the fire department."

Mr. McKissock then read the bill, which was approved April 28, 1911.

He then referred to Chapter 258 which provides that call men in the fire department of the city of Fall River may be promoted and become permanent members of the fire department without civil service examination, provided that they shall pass such physical examination as may be prescribed by the board of fire commissioners of that city, but that the act shall apply only to call men now in the department and it shall become a law five years after its passage. This bill was approved April 10, 1911.

Commenting on the act, Capt. McKissock said: "What real good is going to be accomplished by the provisions of this act? I was told by the chairman of the committee that there were only four or five men who would come within the provisions of it. If the intention was to secure that four or five from the age limit of the civil service rules, it may be an act of justice, but I cannot see where it is going to do a great deal of good unless changes are made in Fall River a great deal more frequently than in any other city of its size in the state. I am going to say that the men who are interested in securing the enactment of this law will get the benefit of it."

Bill Was Vetoed

Capt. McKissock then referred to House bill No. 1434, a bill accompanying the petition of Charles F. McCarthy for legislation to provide for placing certain call firemen of the city of Marlborough in the permanent fire department of said city. This bill was redrafted of House bill 1462 and passed through the various stages of enactment, was sent to the governor and vetoed. The last paragraph of the governor's veto was: "The call men should be perfectly willing to compete for positions in the permanent force, and not rely upon political influence for appointment."

The Call Men

House bills Nos. 1342 and 1348 were then taken up by Capt. McKissock. The former was a petition of Charles T. Tobin for legislation relative to the promotion of call men in fire departments, and the latter was the petition of James E. Griffin for legislation relative to the promotion of call men in the fire department of the city of Lawrence.

Referring to the above bills, the speaker said: "It would appear that both of the petitioners of this and the previous petition, No. 1342, were unfamiliar with the record of the past on legislation of this kind. For myself, I am astonished at the effort that is being made every year to try to secure the promotion of call men to positions of civil service in fire departments and appointments by competitive examination has come to stay. The methods now in vogue may be faulty, and we may all agree that there will be better ones discovered later, but my advice to any member of the fire department or to any person who is in the fire department is that it would be better to take the time he spends in trying to secure an appointment by political preference and fit himself to pass an examination. He will get there just as quick, if he is any good, and he does he will know that he got there by his own merit and will have no one but his own self to thank for having secured the position. The fact that the commissioners of the fire departments in large cities are extending competitive examination rules to the positions of lieutenant, captain, district chief and chief is an evidence that it would be better for the future to secure the extension of civil service rules for examination than to curtail them. Therefore, it would be well to avoid wasting time on this matter that could be used in making yourself perfectly able to pass any examination that might be put up to you."

Retirement of Firemen

Next, the speaker took up a bill accompanying the petition of Isaac R. Willets for legislation to provide for the retirement of members of the fire department of the city of Fall River, which subsequently became chapter 277 of the Acts of 1911. The act provides for the retirement and places on the pension roll any permanent member of the department of Fall River who has become disabled while in the performance of his duty, or has performed faithful service for not less than twenty years, or who has reached the age of sixty. Capt. McKissock said that he could not see that it was any great advantage over the general act.

He then took up House bill No. 894, which accompanied the petition of Michael P. O'Brien for legislation relative to the pensioning of members of the fire department of the city of Boston. This bill was reported favorably by the committee on cities and passed the various stages of enactment but was vetoed by the governor.

Capt. McKissock then referred to the bill accompanying the petition of May or John P. Fitzgerald of Boston to authorize the city of Boston to pension Charles M. Chapman and Cyrus A. George. He said that it looked like a good bill and should apply to all persons employed in the fire alarm divisions of any city as well as the city of Boston.

State Forester's Powers

Continuing, Capt. McKissock then read the act defining the powers of state forester with regard to forest fires.

Section 3 of the act provides that the state fire warden appointed under the terms of section 1 shall report annually upon his work and upon the forest fires occurring in the commonwealth, and his report shall be included in and be printed as a part of the state forester's annual report. Section 4.—The sum of ten thousand dollars is

APPLY THIS PASTE AND THE HAIRS WILL VANISH

(Fashion Monthly)

After all, electricity is not destined to play much of a part in the removal of fuzz or hairy growths from the skin's surface, for a new and simple powder, known to druggists as delatone, does the work quicker and eliminates the expense and pain following the use of the electric needle.

To rid the skin of hairs we wanted, it is only necessary to make a paste with powdered delatone and water. Apply this to the hairy surface, and after two or three minutes' rub off and wash the skin and the hair or fuzz will have completely vanished. While delatone costs a dollar an ounce, the price is insignificant as it does the work quickly and well without any possible injury.

State Fire Warden

In speaking relative to the Bill Capt. McKissock said: "There is the appointment of the state fire warden and a sufficient sum of money to carry out the provisions of the act during the year 1911. I am not going to say much about this because the state forester is going to be with us sometime during the convention and he will tell you something about the work. I can only say, and I am glad to be able to do it, that from what I learn the state has secured the services, by this act which became chapter 722 of the Acts of 1911, of one of the best men for the position I think could be found and I am very glad that the political conditions in the state of New York made it possible for the state of Massachusetts to secure this man's services. It emphasizes beyond the shadow of a doubt the importance of eliminating politics from appointments to positions which are for the duties the prevention and extinguishment of fires, not only in the forest and spruce lands, but in fire departments generally."

He then read chapter 722, which shows that the state fire warden is authorized to add and advise the fire warden of towns and cities for the prevention of forest fires. The final section of the act are as follows: Section 3.—The deputies of the fish and game commissioners shall report to the state fire warden the situation and extent of any forest fires occurring within the district to which they are assigned, and they shall report to him monthly their doings under chapter two hundred and ninety-nine of the laws of the year nineteen hundred and seven. Section 4.—The sum of ten thousand dollars is hereby appropriated to carry out the provisions of this act during the year nineteen hundred and eleven. [Approved July 13, 1911.]

THREE GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS---ARMY, NAVY AND POSTAL---ARE INTERESTED IN FLYING

By CHARLES N. LUKIE.

TO date three of the nine departments of the United States government—the army, the navy and the postoffice—have taken official notice of the development and use of the aeroplane. There now seems to be little hope of adapting the flying machine to the service of the other departments, save perhaps as a speedy method of conveying intelligence from one place to another. There has been some local talk of the agriculture department's inducing the farmer to plow his field in the usual manner and sow it by dropping seeds from an aeroplane, but Uncle Jim Wilson's experts do not think the scheme will work.

But the land and sea forces are experimenting every day with the heavier than air flying machines. On this we are following the lead of Great Britain, France and other countries, and the postoffice department has not been discouraged by the failure of the aerial post in Great Britain. Postmaster General Hitchcock is enthusiastic about the success of the aerial mail carrying experiments at the recent international aviation meet on Long Island and has had under consideration further experiments and tests.

Air All Right, Says Hitchcock.

As all newspaper readers know, the postmaster general flew with Captain Beck, an army aviator, to deliver mail. He liked the experience and said when asked about the use of the aeroplane by his department:

"Air routes are all right for practical mail carrying. I mean the air is all right, but the vehicles must continue toward perfection. But even with the aeroplane as it is now it would be very useful to us, particularly in some parts of the country. Take along the Colorado river in the canyon district of Alaska, for instance, or in parts of Alaska. Along the Colorado there are places where detours of fifty miles out of the way are made in mail routes to get to a bridge."

Flying Over the Sierras?

It is an interesting picture Mr. Hitchcock suggests—the lonely bird man, bearing in his machine precious letters for out of the way corners of the country and disputing with the eagle of the Sierras the right of way in the rarefied air.

The use of the aeroplane for naval purposes has seemed a present and future possibility since November of last year, when Eugene B. Ely flew in a biplane from the deck of the scout cruiser Birmingham, lying in Hampton Roads, Virginia, and landed safely near Norfolk, five miles away, in five minutes. At that time Ely simply flew from the warship to shore. Two months afterward, on Jan. 18, 1911, he performed the feat of flying from shore to the deck of the Pennsylvania, lying in San Francisco harbor, remaining there an hour and then winging his way to shore. The two achievements of Ely aroused the naval men to a sense of what might be done in the way of converting the aeroplane into a naval auxiliary, and active experimentation on that line has been going on ever since that time. Captain W. I. Chambers is in charge of the nation's naval aeronautics, if the term may be permitted. The best known of the navy aviators is Lieutenant John L. Rodgers, who flew recently from Annapolis to Washington.

It has been demonstrated amply, both in this country and abroad, that the movements of warships may be followed easily by men in aeroplanes. Aviators who have flown above the seafighters have testified to their amazement at the curious appearance of the big battleships, foreshortened to the eye of the downlooker, as compared with their familiar appearance when viewed broadside. For the most part, they agree with Lieutenant Rodgers in saying that even a Dreadnought heaving on the surface of the ocean would not be an easy mark for a bomb dropped from an aeroplane, talking into consideration the aviator's necessity of moving always at high speed.

Aviation in the army has made more advances than flying in the sister service, probably because the possibility of using the aeroplane as a fighting machine occurred sooner to army men than it did to the naval experts. The army now has a corps of fliers, organized and directed by the head of the signal service, General James Allen. Captain Charles De F. Chandler is in charge of the army's aviation grounds at College Park, Md. With him are associated several young men who have shown ability in guiding the machines after instruction by professional aviators. They are Captain

Paul W. Beck, Lieutenants Henry H. Arnold, Roy C. Kirtland, Frank M. Kennedy, Thomas De W. Milling and Benjamin D. Foulois. Milling is the man who broke the passenger carrying record at the recent international aviation meet at Nassau boulevard, New York, by carrying two privates of Company L, Twenty-ninth Infantry, in 1 hour, 54 minutes and 42.3-5 seconds. Captain Beck shared with Ovington the mail carrying honors at the same meet. Probably the best known of the army aviators is Foulois, who was detailed by the war department to receive instructions from Aviator Parmelee at the big army encampment at San Antonio, Tex., and proved himself so apt a pupil that he has been advanced now to the rank of instructor to the national guardsmen of the country.

Foulois is going to tour the country to get into close touch with the national guardsmen who are interested in organizing branches of the aviation corps in their respective states. The authorities in several states have enlisted the services of men who are willing and eager to fly in military aeroplanes. It is expected that Lieutenant Foulois will be busy in keeping abreast of the advances, both foreign and American, in aviation.

HOW A BIG CITY'S MAIL IS HANDLED

Interior of Postal Car and Fast Mail Train.

TWO cents, that's all—just two of the very smallest coins we have—but drop them into Uncle Sam's pocket and get in return a steel portrait of George Washington done in red, for which a whole army of men, all the railroads of the country and a mass of wonderful machinery are put at your disposal as a way to shame the famous lamp of offices handle 15,000,000,000 pieces of mail yearly and that the percentage of stray or lost epistles is practically negligible, the fact is assertive that the service is as near to infallibility as human work may come.

Taking Mr. Citizen of New York for an example, he does his end by dropping his properly addressed and stamped envelope in the nearest postal box. A few minutes later along comes a collection wagon.

At the postoffice the wagon's contents are dumped through a long chute on to tables over which pours a constant avalanche of mail coming from every direction. The New York postoffice handles daily between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 pieces of mail.

While the white mountain of mail grows higher and higher, clerks are valiantly attacking it, removing big armfuls of letters, arranging them so that all the envelopes stand on edge and all face the same way and placing them on the feeding board of a busy little apparatus that looks something like a sewing machine and hums like it when it is in motion. This is the automatic stamp cancelling machine. The letters are fed into it by revolving wheels and in passing through each stamp is canceled and the postmark is stamped. The cancelling machine eats up 20,000 letters or 40,000 postals in an hour.

Then the cancelling machine the letters are carried in bundles to the primary separation tables, which face a big case made up of compartments about a foot square. Each of these bears the name of a city, state or group of states. The clerks go swiftly through the bundles of mail that they carry and throw each letter into its proper compartment. Other clerks remove the letters from these cases and take them to the secondary separation tables, which are arranged in similar fashion except that the number of separate compartments is much larger. Each of these is marked with the name of some city or postal route and the number of separate routes and locations that each clerk must have literally at his finger tips runs anywhere from five to ten thousand. Each clerk disposes of from fifty to sixty a minute. Though working at this speed it is very rarely that a mistake occurs.

By this time Mr. Citizen's letter is reposing with a large number of others in the compartment marked "New York and Chicago railway postoffice," which means that it is to go to one of the travelling postoffices operated on the through mail trains between these two cities. The next process is "loading out." The letters are placed in bundles, each one tied with a string and marked on top with a "facing slip" containing the name of the route to which it is consigned. These bundles are dropped to the basement of the postoffice building through a chute, and there they are placed in cylindrical shells constructed on the same principle as the pneumatic change carriers employed in department stores. Each shell holds about half a bushel of letters. The journey of about three and a half miles to the railway postoffice is made in seven minutes, or at the rate of thirty miles an hour. With the old fashioned method of wagon delivery the same trip would require from half to three-quarters of an hour.

At this office the mail is emptied out of the pneumatic shells into regulation mail bags, each properly tagged, and is dropped through big chutes to the platform alongside the tracks where the railway mail cars stand waiting. Thus far Mr. Citizen's letter has traveled perhaps four miles in a period that may have been one hour or three. Now, however, it begins to make real speed. On board "No. 35," which leaves the city of New York at half past 9 every night and claims the proud distinction of being the world's greatest mail train, it will make seventy miles an hour over much of this stage of its journey.

White Cross of Italy Against Red Crescent of Turkey

AFTER an interval of fourteen years the soil of Europe echoed again to the tramp of armed men of a European nation marching against another when Italy declared war against Turkey. Although there have been wars and rumors of wars in all parts of the earth since the close of the Greco-Turkish war of 1897, the sword has not been drawn until now, save in those cases in which a nation of Europe warred against one situated outside of the continent. And if the brief Greco-Turkish struggle be left out of consideration—for it was hardly more than a skirmish—it is thirty-three years since the last big European war disturbed the world. Then, as in the present instance, Turkey was one of the parties to the strife. Her opponent in 1877-78 was Russia.

All three of these wars were brought about by the insatiable hunger of other nations for territory nominally Turkish, but attached to the empire by slender bands. Russia fought to free Serbia, Montenegro and other Christian countries from Mohammedan rule. Greece sought to aid the aspirations of the Christian Cretans for freedom. Italy professed no religious motive in declaring war on the Ottoman empire, save incidentally, but asserted that Italian preferential commercial rights on the northern African littoral had been violated by the Turks. The murder of an Italian missionary in Tripoli and the persecution by the Ottoman authorities of native Tripolitans simply the very ancient one of "grab." The weakness of Turkey on the water at the outset of the war was pitiable and almost laughable. Her biggest ship was built in 1874, decades before the era of modern vessels, and its recent reconstruction did not convert it, in the opinion of naval experts, into a serviceable, up to date vessel.

If Turkey could send her fighting men—and their mettle has been proved in many a hard fought battle—against against one situated outside of the continent. And if the brief Greco-Turkish struggle be left out of consideration—for it was hardly more than a skirmish—it is thirty-three years since the last big European war disturbed the world. Then, as in the present instance, Turkey was one of the parties to the strife. Her opponent in 1877-78 was Russia.

All three of these wars were brought about by the insatiable hunger of other nations for territory nominally Turkish, but attached to the empire by slender bands. Russia fought to free Serbia, Montenegro and other Chris-

the depolarization that Italy's game is the Italians the outcome of the war might not have been in doubt, say the military experts. Tripoli has been one of the disturbed sections of the earth's surface for centuries. It has not accepted easily the Turkish rule which was imposed on it in the sixteenth century, when the Ottoman empire saw its greatest period of expansion and splendor. One hundred and ten years ago the United States was compelled to wage successful war against Tripoli and the other Barbary states by the piratical exploits of their people.

Girl Was Murdered

SHARP QUESTIONS

Put to Talesman Robinson at the McNamara Trial Today

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 19.—The McNamara murder trial was resumed today at the beginning of a new court calendar week with prospects that in the course of the session Judge Bordwell would rule on two peremptory challenges made yesterday by the defense on the ground that a talesman who believes the Los Angeles Times building was blown up by dynamite cannot be a fair juror.

This position is taken because of the defense's position that the explosion in the Times building was caused by gas and that counsel defending James B. McNamara on trial for the murder of Charles Haggerty, who was killed in the disaster, should not be compelled to show otherwise in order to get a fair trial. The state contends that so long as a juror has no opinion as to McNamara's guilt or innocence he may be a fair juror.

The course of challenges, under California procedure, promises much work ahead before a jury is empaneled. Further examination of Talesman Edward C. Robinson was set for today. Robinson said late yesterday that he was opposed to unions because he was opposed to strikes.

Robinson was interrogated by Lieutenant Davis for the defense.

"Did you hear about O. E. McNamara's statement is this case?"

"Yes."

Witness said he had heard he had made a written statement to Detective Burns.

"Now are your impressions as to the labor unions fixed?"

"Yes."

"Would you, if sworn a juror and it should be proven that the Times building was destroyed by dynamite placed by human agencies, would you be inclined to believe any member of organized labor did it?"

"Not necessarily so."

"If it were disclosed to you during the trial that the Times was destroyed by dynamite and human agency would you give any weight at all to the fact that the defendant was a member of organized labor?"

"No."

"So if it were proved that the defendant was a member of organized labor you could disregard that fact?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever talk about the matter?"

"I may have."

"When you did, your son took the view that the labor unions had nothing to do with it and you took the view that the unions did?"

"No," he said, "if labor unions did do it he wished they would catch the guilty parties."

"Why didn't you tell us what your son said. You told us you did not talk to your son about the Times explosion?"

"I didn't think it was necessary; didn't think it was of much importance."

WATER WORKS BUSY

System in Highland District Being Reinforced

The water board met last evening and voted to grant an extension of time on the opening of bids for the building of the new pumping station at the boulevard until next Wednesday, when the board will meet again.

The water department is taking advantage of the good weather and is doing considerable outside work at the present time. Much of the work is in the Highland district where the low pressure and a large increase in the number of dwellings has made it necessary to make improvements.

The department has just put in an extension of 280 feet in B street between Wilder and Stevens street, 18-inch pipe being used. It is now at work in Pine street replacing the 6-inch with 8-inch pipe between Parker and Georgia avenue, a distance of 1830 feet.

Next week the department will put a new 6-inch main in Preston street, a distance of 225 feet, while work will be begun on a 12-inch main in Hale street from Thorndike to Chelmsford street, a distance of 2650 feet. The 6-inch pipe in Shaw street, between Powell and Wilder will be replaced by 10-inch pipe, a distance of 1700 feet.

Word has been received that the pipe for the new driven wells will be shipped within a few days.

At present there are 60 men employed laying pipe, 40 on the reservoir job while 15 have been employed testing the ground for the new wells.

the trial that the Times was destroyed by dynamite and human agency would you give any weight at all to the fact that the defendant was a member of organized labor?"

"No."

"So if it were proved that the defendant was a member of organized labor you could disregard that fact?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever talk about the matter?"

"I may have."

"When you did, your son took the view that the labor unions had nothing to do with it and you took the view that the unions did?"

"No," he said, "if labor unions did do it he wished they would catch the guilty parties."

"Why didn't you tell us what your son said. You told us you did not talk to your son about the Times explosion?"

"I didn't think it was necessary; didn't think it was of much importance."

WIFE EARNS $5000

DOCTOR OBJECTS TO PAYING HER ALIMONY

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The somewhat unusual request of a husband to be relieved of paying his alimony, because his wife is the real bread winner of the family and better able to pay him an allowance than he is to pay her, was made yesterday to Supreme Court Justice Blanchard.

The husband is Dr. Alexander Abrams, of 1391 Madison avenue. The wife is earning, her husband declares, about $500 a year. Dr. Abrams did not ask the court to compel his wife to pay him an allowance from this income from her medical practice, but he did plead to have the court revoke an order directing him to pay his wife $10 a week until the trial of her separation action.

"My wife has a good income of her own and I have none. Why should I pay her money when I need it more than she does?" was the doctor's inquiry.

As Dr. Abrams is in arrears with the alimony that he was ordered to pay, Justice Blanchard did not look with favor upon his application. He said if Abrams will pay up the arrears in alimony, amounting to about $180, he will reduce the wife's weekly allowance to $8 a week.

THE BOSTON POLICE

Trying to Find Party Who Sent Poison to Young Woman

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Thoroughly convinced that Miss Avis Linnell, the young music student, was murdered by someone who wanted her put out of the way and who sent her a powerful drug, which she took under the supposition that it was a corrective, the police bent to the case with renewed energy today with the hope of apprehending the sender of the poison. Chief Dugan of the bureau of criminal investigation stoutly maintains that it is a clear case of murder done unwittingly by the young woman's over-land but surrounded by so many puzzling features as to make it one of the most interesting in his career.

Nearly a dozen police officers are working on the case while a reward was offered today for anyone who would give any information regarding the purchase and sending of the cyanide of potassium, which caused Miss Linnell's death, according to the medical examiner.

In addition, the police are investigating the actions of the young woman and her companions for some time before her death in the bathroom of the Young Woman's Christian Association building on Warren street, Saturday night.

A letter from one of her most intimate friends at the association was published today stating that Miss Linnell lunched with Rev. Clarence V. Richeson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge and formerly Miss Linnell's pastor and friend at her home at Hyannis. Rev. Mr. Richeson is known to his room in Cambridge by illness but when he recovers a committee of his church will interrogate him. Cards for his wedding with Miss Violet Edmunds, the daughter of a wealthy resident of Chestnut Hill, on October 31 were issued today.

Miss Linnell's friends declare that it was generally understood that the minister was engaged at one time to marry the music student and so convinced were they of his interest in her that one of them notified him by telephone on Saturday night of Miss Linnell's death and some of the circumstances attending it.

Upon reading the letter of Miss Emma Burkhous, a friend of Miss Linnell at the association, to Miss Emma Sturges of Hyannis, a sister of the dead girl, published in two morning papers, in which it was stated that Rev. Mr. Richeson lunched with Miss Linnell on Saturday, Mrs. Moses Grant Edmunds of Brookline issued a statement today to the effect that the minister called on her daughter that afternoon.

The friends of Mr. Richeson have been very active since his name was published in connection with the death of Miss Linnell and today it was stated in Cambridge that every effort would be made to assist the police in the investigation which these friends declare will lead in another direction.

Rev. Dr. George Croft of the Newton Theological institution, from which Rev. Mr. Richeson was graduated, will preach for the young minister at the Immanuel church on Sunday. The church inquiry into the case is set for Oct. 27th, behind closed doors.

Chief Dugan admitted at noon today that he had been unable to locate any person who bought such a quantity of cyanide of potassium and that he intended to pursue his investigations along different lines.

When asked regarding Rev. Mr. Richeson, Chief Dugan said that he had not yet decided whether he would question the young pastor. He would not say whether he had considered him in the case.

THE MCKIERNAN WILL

Was Allowed by Judge McIntire at Cambridge Today

The will of Mary McKiernan of Franklin street was allowed today after a final hearing by Judge McIntire at Cambridge. The amount involved is uncertain but includes a couple of houses on Franklin street together with some life insurance. The case was tried last Tuesday in the probate court in this city. Lawyer John W. McEvoy for the will with Lawyer Joseph Loughran, who drew the will, as a witness. Lawyer Silverblatt appeared for the husband, James McKiernan, who contested the will. After the final hearing this morning Judge McIntire decided to allow the will and Mr. Silverblatt entered an appeal. The matter will go to the supreme court on the question of a jury trial and may not come up until the supreme judicial court sits in this city in April next.

According to the books of the assessors at city hall, the property is valued at $6150, the house being worth $5000 and the land $1150.

A SECRET MARRIAGE

Former Lowell Girl the Bride of a Chauffeur

A rather novel romance which had its inception in this city in 1905 came to a close last Thursday in Portland, Me., when Miss Yvonne Roy, a former Lowell girl, was married to Mr. James Harvey, a chauffeur, of Portsmouth, N. H., and later of Lewiston, Me. The couple are now on their honeymoon trip in this city, where they intend to make their home.

The couple eloped from Lewiston, Me., one week ago today in an automobile and went to Portland, Me., where they were secretly married. They left the next morning for Lowell, and they are now stopping in the Rialto apartment house at the corner of Moody and Austin streets.

This romance, as above stated, started in Lowell in 1905 at the automobile races. Harvey, who was then chauffeur for a Portsmouth man, came to this city with his employer to witness the races. During his stay in Lowell the young man got acquainted with Miss Yvonne Roy, a charming blonde, at that time aged 18 years. They became infatuated with each other and after the young chauffeur returned to Portsmouth, the lovers kept exchanging love letters. A year ago the young woman returned to live with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Roy, in Lewiston, Me., and a short while later the young man secured employment in the latter city as chauffeur for William Gray, a proprietor of moving picture shows.

There again the courtship was resumed, the young man calling at his fiancée's home quite often. The parents of the girl objected, it is said, to the marriage. Finally it was agreed by both that an elopement would be in order and the plans for the adventure were prepared. Mr. Gray, the young man's employer, was brought into the secret, and it seems that he agreed to lend a helping hand, and last Wednesday Miss Roy informed her parents that she was going to Portland on a short trip the next day and no more was thought of it.

The following day, which was Thursday, Miss Roy and Mr. Harvey went to Portland in Mr. Gray's automobile, and they were married by a clergyman, Mr. Gray, who was aware of the elopement, was on hand to speed the machine back to Lewiston. The next morning the couple took the first train for this city, where the bride has many relatives, including an uncle, Mr. John B. Roy, of Fayette street.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey are stopping at the Rialto apartment house in Moody street, and Mr. Harvey, who is an expert chauffeur, is looking for employment, as they both want to make their home here.

The bride, who is 19 years of age, when interviewed by a Sun reporter this morning, stated that she had mailed a letter to her parents yesterday, the message bearing the news of her marriage to the man she loved. She is a very handsome blonde, while the husband, who is 23 years of age, is

GOLDBERGS ARE GUILTY AT TEXTILE SCHOOL

They Broke Into a Jewelry Store In Boston

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—In the superior court today before Judge Ratigan a jury returned a verdict of guilty against Jacob and Joseph Goldberg for breaking and entering the jewelry store of Sam Ullian on the night of Feb. 27, 1910, and the larceny of property to the amount of $13,000. Soon after the crime the Goldbergs were arrested in New York but succeeded in having a small amount of bail fixed while waiting extradition and fled. At the cost of many thousands of dollars District Attorney Pelletier had the Goldbergs followed through Europe and Inspector Lynch spent many months in locating them. One was apprehended in Austria and the other in Russia and both men were brought back to Boston several weeks ago.

Counsel for the defendants announced his intention of taking the case on exceptions to the full bench of the supreme judicial court, but under the statutes Judge Ratigan will shortly impose sentences, regardless of the exceptions.

ALEXANDER G. CUMNOCK,
President Lowell Textile School.

Board of Trade Saw Much of Interest Last Evening

The members of the board of trade assembled in large numbers at the Lowell Textile school last evening despite the inclemency of the weather, the occasion being an inspection of the school and a meeting of the board held at the institution.

From 7 to 8.30 the members were escorted through the buildings by the instructors and members of the faculty after the meeting was opened in the school hall, Harvey B. Greene presiding. President Greene, after outlining the purpose of the meeting, spoke on the importance of industrial education. He was much surprised at the attendance at the industrial schools and the interest taken in them and he stated that the mill agents were appreciative of the possibilities of industrial education.

Principal William H. Dooley of the industrial school was then called upon and he described in detail the methods employed in educational institutions similar to that of which he is the head, in imparting knowledge to pupils. He said that the industrial school supplies the training which formerly came from the system of apprenticeship in the various factories. He stated that the condition existing today in industrial centers is due to the lack of competent skilled help. The industrial school aims to take the boy from 14 to 17 years of age and train him along industrial lines, and give him the benefit of a practical education in the many branches of employment.

The school is organized for the training of boys and girls for life activities and duties, and to give them a training in the branches of knowledge and trades that are most useful in gaining a livelihood. To meet these requirements, the industrial school offers courses for girls in housekeeping, dress making, millinery, power machine work and for boys a preliminary training in the following trades: Cabinet maker, machinist, mechanical draftsman, electrician, engineer, automobile repairing, carpenter and architectural drafting.

Mr. Dooley said that Massachusetts felt that every boy was a valuable unit as an industrial factor, and was willing to provide education which would take care of the 25,000 idle boys in the state of the age of 14 to 16. The school provides day courses, evening courses and part courses, and is located at the Merrill school in Common street for girls, and in the old Bartlett school in Clark street for boys. The old Moody school is being equipped for preliminary textile training, which will serve the purpose of educating foreigners.

Mr. Dooley expressed the hope that the board of trade would assist him in every way and that the manufacturers would give him such information as would tend to make the school a permanent and very useful institution in the city of Lowell.

Principal Charles H. Eames of the Lowell Textile school was the next speaker. He spoke on the purpose of the Textile school and expressed the opinion that any school with similar aims must succeed. He quoted foreign visitors to the school as saying that it is the finest institution of its kind in the world. With reference to courses, he said that the same corps of instructors officiated at night as in the day, so that an equal chance was given to all for instruction. He extended an invitation to the Lowell board of trade to inspect the school at any time the school was in session.

An address by A. G. Cumnock, president of the Lowell Textile school, followed. Mr. Cumnock emphasized the importance of skilled labor in the textile industry and spoke of the opportunities existing today for men properly educated in the textile business. At the conclusion of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was tendered. During the business meeting an amendment to the constitution was adopted, providing for the membership of the boards of trade in surrounding towns.

An Enemy to Debility

GAINS GREAT FAVOR IN THIS CITY

"That nervous debility finds its origin during one of those periods of overstrained and convulsive exertion, so common with those who are forced to endure the strain of modern city life, is the statement of one of the experts who are here explaining the nature of this modern plague and demonstrating the remarkable value of the new tonic, 'Tonn Vita'."

"Debility," says this expert, "is that condition of the body or any of its organs in which the vital functions are discharged with less than normal vigor, the amount of power and activity displayed being reduced. It simply means that the body is dispossessed of its characteristic properties, and combined with a high state of nervousness, the modern plague, nervous debility, is produced. The body is then in a state of languor and decline."

"The following symptoms are characteristic of this trouble: Lassitude, nervousness, sleeplessness, thudity, depression of spirits, poor digestion, stomach and bowel troubles, depression and despondency."

"These are unmistakable indications of nervous debility, and there are thousands here in Lowell, like all large cities, who suffer with this trouble in its most distressing form."

"Tonn Vita" will act in such cases like a true specific. From the moment the medicine is taken, improvement is rapid.

"While we are meeting a great many callers each day and hundreds of debilitated people are regaining their health through our medicine, there are thousands more whom we want to reach before our stay in Lowell is over. If all the men and women who are struggling along, depressed in mind and body by nervous debility, unable to get any real enjoyment out of living, would only take the trouble to come in and talk with us, we would bring a tremendous amount of happiness to the people of this city. There is little real pleasure in life for an individual who feels continually worn out. Positively the very first dose of our tonic benefits a man or woman in this condition."

The "Tonn Vita" introductory sale is now being conducted at Hall & Lyon's drug store, where experts are always on hand to meet the public.

INTERESTING TALK

DELIVERED BY PRINCIPAL DOOLEY OF INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

Principal Dooley in his address at the Textile school last night said:

"I have visited practically all the textile schools in this country and in Europe, and I must confess there is not one that has better equipment or better facilities for providing the highest education in the textile arts than the Lowell Textile school. The state of Massachusetts, and the city of Lowell, has a grand institution to dignify its leading industry."

"This institution, like most technical schools, aims to be of collegiate rank. That is, it provides the highest training in textile arts for students over sixteen or seventeen years of age, who have had a high school education, or its equivalent. Similar courses are provided evenings for those who have a grammar school education, or its equivalent. In other words, this special institution prepares the leaders of the great industrial army, employed in the textile industry of this country. It is doing its work well, and is doing this work better than ever before."

"The education received in this school is the highest possible training in textile arts. This education and training is often above the average mill operative and often exceeds the real educational needs of the positions in the ordinary mill. Little if any effort is made by the present schools to supply textile education of a primary grade, that is a simpler textile education to the great mass of young people between fourteen and seventeen years of age, who desire a practical education and evening or part time instruction to the operatives in mills who desire instruction to meet their daily needs."

"The success of any great industry does not depend solely on the leaders but to a great extent on the non-commissioned officers and the privates. In fact, a great many people feel that real efficiency can only be obtained by educating the operatives."

"What provisions are we making for the rank and file of the industrial

Registration for State Election Closed Last Night

Just 15,111 qualified voters will have the privilege on election day of stating whether Lowell shall have a new charter or not, for registration closed last evening with the total number of names on the check-list as above.

This is a material increase over last year's registration before state election, the total number one year ago was as follows: Ward one, 34; ward two, 10; ward three, 8; ward four, 15; ward five, 13; ward six, 28; ward seven, 7; ward eight, 22; ward nine, 20.

By these figures it will be seen that ward three is still the largest ward in voting population in this city with ward seven second and ward eight, third. Up to within a couple of years ward eight was the largest. Last year it held second place but this year ward seven passed it. Ward five is the smallest ward. Precinct 3 of ward seven, Pawtucketville, is the largest precinct in Lowell.

POSTAL SAVINGS

Bank to Open at Post Office Saturday

The postal savings bank will open in the money order office at the local post office Saturday morning and it remains to be seen whether the number of depositors will be large.

In conversation with a representative of The Sun this morning, Postmaster Legare said he hoped that the people of Lowell would make the most of the opportunity as he is anxious to establish a record for the number of depositors. Relative to whether or not it would be necessary to engage extra clerks to handle the new business, the postmaster said that for the present at least the regular force of clerks in the money order department would take care of the new work.

THE CARNEGIE HEROES

Medals and Money for People Who Did Brave Acts

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 19.—Forty-seven bronze and 12 silver medals were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission at its fall meeting here yesterday, as a recognition of bravery in saving human life or in attempts in which the life of the rescuer was jeopardized. In addition to the medals to these 59 persons cash awards were made for reimbursing loss, for relieving debt on homes and the purchase of homes, for educational and other worthy purposes as needed, amounting to $3,034. Pensions to survivors amounting to $316 monthly were also issued, and for children left without support $5 a month was awarded each to the amount of $50 monthly.

Of the rescues one was saving a man from a wild animal. Thirteen of the heroes lost their lives.

Some of the awards follow:

James M. Snyder, bronze medal and $1000 for purchase of farm. Snyder, aged 51, a farm foreman, rescued Pharon Hausman, aged 69, from a bison at Schencksville, Pa., March 3, 1911. The infuriated animal was attacking Hausman, when Snyder, at the risk of his life, threw his overcoat over the bison's head.

An Allston Hero

A silver medal and a pension of $40 a month to the widow of Alexander Fraser, also $5 a month additional for her daughter until she reaches the age of 16. Fraser, who was aged 48, and was a trowman, sustained fatal injuries trying to save Frank O. Stenberg, aged 28, a stationary engineer, at Allston, Mass., Jan. 16, 1907. Fraser entered an engine room filled with steam, which was escaping at 85 pounds pressure from an exploded engine, in search of Stenberg, who he thought was in the room. In about five minutes he came out of the room badly scalded. He was taken to the hospital, where he died the next morning. Stenberg had left the engine room before Fraser went in.

A bronze medal and $1000 to Alexander Morton, Sr. The money is to liquidate the indebtedness of Morton and to be used for other worthy purposes as needed. Morton, who is aged 45 and is a miner, saved Louis Davidson, aged 30, a salesman, from drowning at Revere, Mass., Aug. 19, 1908. Morton, who was recovering from injuries received in a mine, swam 150 feet to Davidson, who had become distressed in water six feet deep. He was grasped by the shoulder and pulled under the surface. Upon coming up they were separated, and Morton shouted for help while he swam 20 feet with Davidson, who was half-conscious, and grasped the hand of a man who had waded out from shore. Morton and two men pulled Davidson to shallow water and to the bench where he revived.

Braved Death By Train

A bronze medal and $1000 to Louis J. Bruya, aged 38, a telegrapher, who saved George O. Perkins, aged 72, from being run over by a train at Montpelier, Vt., May 11, 1910. Dashing on the track ahead of an approaching train, Bruya caught Perkins, who was walking in the middle of the track with his back to the train and shoved him off the track, the train being but a few feet off when they cleared the rail.

A bronze medal and $1000 to Patrick H. Campbell, Campbell, who is aged 27 and is a groundkeeper, saved Charles D. Stone, aged 41, an advertising agent, from drowning at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 27, 1909. Campbell, who was dressed and suffering from an ailment which made him short of breath and tired him quickly, went to the help of Stone, who became distressed in Lake Quinsigamond, 25 feet from shore in water 15 feet deep. Stone threw both arms around Campbell's neck and both went under, but came up in a minute, still clasped together, when Campbell caught a life preserver that had been thrown to him and both were pulled in shore.

Howard L. Davis, bronze medal and $1215 toward purchase of home. Davis was badly burned rescuing a child from a fire at West Haven, Conn., March 24, 1911.

John G. Walker, bronze medal and $500 toward buying home. Walker (colored) rescued Edward F. Butler, mayor and lawyer; Green Thomas, laborer; William G. Obeir, quartermaster-general, Georgia militia, (colored); and a runaway at Madison, Ga., June 27, 1909.

LEAVES HIS FAMILY

Jersey Postmaster Starts Out to Seek a Fortune

HACKENSACK, N. J., Oct. 19.—Herbert Keystone, who has conducted a small grocery and was postmaster at Hackensack, six miles north of Hackensack, on the New Jersey & New York railroad, left home late Monday night, leaving a note to his wife to say he had gone to seek his fortune.

Under a handkerchief on the table Mrs. Keystone found three letters, one addressed "To My Wife" and the others to May, the eldest child, and Justice Angell.

The letter to Mrs. Keystone read as follows:

Dear Alice—My Dear, Dear Wife: Try and forgive me for the step I am going to take, but if I stay longer I will go crazy and might do something desperate. That everlasting worry for money drives me out of my mind. I have not enough capital to run a paying business and this is such a town, besides.

I am going off trying to raise some money, and then we will have a home of our own and not depend on other people. Dear Alice, I think you will get along for a while. I left you all instructions about rent and interest. Try and sell as soon as possible. Do nothing, but take care of our children. Make them do their lessons. A good education is the best, and maybe the only thing we can give them.

Take good care of yourself for the children's sake, they only have you just now. I cannot write any more. Forgive your loving husband.

Hard luck seemed to follow my husband since we were married," said Mrs. Keystone. "He never drank nor smoked, and always worked hard for our three children and me. His feed business failed. Last summer the postoffice was robbed of $275, and he had to make that good. In July our horse was killed on the railroad, and a month later fire ruined his store in Hillsdale. It was no wonder that he became despondent, but I wish he had taken me into his confidence."

Justice Angell was left the combination of the safe, but it could not be opened, and until the federal inspector arrives it cannot be determined whether the accounts are all right.

Keystone is 35 years of age and has been postmaster for two years. No one knows how he left Hackensack. He took no extra clothes with him.

LOWELL OPERA HOUSE

Mr. Chas. W. Collins, of the Chicago Inter Ocean, in reviewing a performance of "The Beauty Spot," which comes to the Opera House next Tuesday, Oct. 24, had this to say:

Even the excessive heat of an August day could not prevent one from becoming somewhat excited over "The Beauty Spot." Here is a musical entertainment with more excuse than the average; it is cleverly executed, amusing, melodious and colorful. In this day of frenzied frolics on the stage it is a pleasure to see things so well done.

According to the current fashion it is called a "musical play," but it comes close to the line of legitimate comic opera and is lifted almost to that standard by an engaging score of Reginald DeKoven's composition. The piece was discovered Monday night at the Garrick theatre, where a large crowd assembled to spot the beauties. That duty was accomplished to everyone's satisfaction, the splendid quality of the production was received in an enthusiastic manner.

The musical numbers were beautiful, and all of them bright. Those entrusted to the principals were well managed, and the concerted and dancing selections were excellently staged. Particularly expert in technique were the ensembles, of which there are three. The justly this device comic opera, which heretofore has been greatly abused by bunglers. The production is strong for beauty, not only in spots, but in the ensemble. In all its details the cast is good, and the handsome show girls insure a heavy seat sale for the front rows.

Buy a fan and see "The Beauty Spot." It is replete with entertainment and redundant of curves.

GERTRUDE RENNYSON

Thursday evening Nov. 17th is the date announced for the appearance here at the Opera House of the distinguished American soprano Gertrude Rennyson. Miss Rennyson, who numbers many Lowell friends among her admirers, has appeared with great success both as the leading soprano with the Henry W. Savage English Grand Opera Co. and at the leading theatres of Brussels, Vienna, Dresden, and a season at Covent Garden and Bayreuth. In fact Miss Rennyson had the distinction of being the first American singer after Lillian Nordica to sing "Elsa" at Bayreuth.

"THE GAMBLERS"

One of the dramatic hits of the current Boston season is that of "The Gamblers" by Charles Klein, and when Jane Cowie and Orme Caldara headlined the cast. "The Gamblers" comes to the Opera House immediately following the Boston engagement.

KEITH'S LOWELL THEATRE

And now comes to Lowell the greatest hit in modern vaudeville and the most interesting character on the American stage today, Mme. Sukimo, a coal mining woman. Her performance consists of singing in carefully trained voice two English and two Japanese songs, but her presence on an occidental stage is something greater than a mere entertainment; it is a great moral lesson. What she has really done is something colossal, for she has mastered the English language and the European scale of music which is so strange and unmusical to the people of the Flowery Kingdom as theirs is to us. Mme. Sukimo was first drawn to European music when at high school she once heard a Japanese orchestra playing the Wagnerian operas. She then took up the study of harmony of the German and Italian operas, and states that the cultivated Japanese appreciates first the German and then the Italian school. Mme. Sukimo adheres strictly to her native dress and insists on her attendants wearing it even on the stage. She appears on the stage in an exquisite Japanese setting. Her appearance has created great enthusiasm among the music loving public wherever she has appeared. Mme. Sukimo will head an exceptionally strong bill at the regular Keith prices.

HATHAWAY THEATRE

All who have witnessed a performance of "The Lost Paradise" at the Hathaway theatre this week agree that it is the best thing that the Donald Meek Stock company has done thus far. The play itself appeals to a Lowell audience more strongly than the ordinary dramatic offering for its scenery are laid in a New England factory town and it deals with the struggle of capital and labor. Introducing many situations with which Lowell working people are familiar. The play is being presented in faultless manner by the Donald Meek Stock company

Imposed on Man Found Guilty of Larceny

Joseph Dupont was sentenced to nine months in jail by Judge Hadley in police court this morning after being found guilty of larceny. Sergt. Ryan arrested Dupont while trying to sell a suit of clothes in a postoffice in Moody street Monday night and when booked at the police station the young man gave his name as John Riley. When examined by the inspectors he admitted having stolen the clothes and also admitted that he stole a bicycle.

Dupont was arraigned before Judge Hadley Tuesday morning under the name of John Riley on a complaint charging him with the larceny of a bicycle and was found guilty but the imposing of sentence was deferred until this morning.

In the meantime it was learned that the defendant's name was Dupont and not Riley and this morning he was charged with the larceny of a suit of clothes from an unknown person and pleaded guilty.

Sergt. Ryan testified that when he caught the defendant the latter was trying to sell the clothing and when questioned as to where he got them said he purchased them in Montreal. An examination of the coat, however, showed that the clothes had been made by a local tailor.

The court after considering the evidence in the case found Dupont guilty on both complaints and ordered him to be committed to jail for six months for the larceny of the bicycle and three months for the larceny of the clothes.

Drunken Offenders

"Not guilty," said Amos Belanger, when asked to plead to a complaint charging him with being drunk. Patrolman Healey testified to arresting the man in Liberty square yesterday morning and that the prisoner was intoxicated. His testimony was corroborated by Court Officer Cawley. The defendant said he had not drunk a drop of liquor yesterday, but that he was sick and weak and might have staggered, but that it was not due to drink. He was found guilty and a fine of $6 imposed.

John Boyle was charged with being drunk on Monday and also with being drunk yesterday. Patrolman Dennett testified that Boyle had been drinking liquor on Monday and was creating a disturbance in Oak Grove avenue. He spoke to the man and advised him to go home. As soon as the patrolman started to walk away Boyle called him vile names. Patrolman Dennett swore out a warrant for Boyle and when it was served yesterday the man was intoxicated. Hence he was asked to plead to two complaints this morning. He was found guilty and a fine of $6 imposed.

Fred A. Giles was sentenced to the state farm but appealed.

HYPNOTIC CHARM

WAS SUDDENLY BROKEN BY A POLICEMAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A comparison of the hypnotic powers of a professional performer, Mrs. Edith Williams, 225 East Twenty-fifth street, Brooklyn, and of the club of Policemen James O'Connor of the Snyder police station was made last night in a Chelsea laundry at 587 Plumb street.

Mrs. Williams had hypnotized a subject in the window of the laundry and was just announcing that the gentleman whom she had put to sleep would be aroused at the theatre where she is performing next week on Monday night when Policeman O'Connor came in. His presence broke the charm, and the hypnotized man jumped as if he had received an electric shock. Before the policeman could recover his wits the man was waving good-bye from a Plumb street car. Mrs. Williams was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct.

Has built up a successful dental practice in this city in little more than 1 year.

WHY?

THREE STRONG REASONS

1st—Absolutely Painless Dentistry— I honestly believe that this is the strongest reason for my success. People come to me in fear and trembling and go away happy—wondering why they doubted.

2nd—The Lowest Prices consistent with good work, a set of teeth as low as $5. Gold crowns and bridges $3 to $5. Teeth without plate $3 to $5. Gold fillings $1; other fillings 50c.

3rd—Perfect Work Guaranteed— My painless perfect dental work causes patients to send their friends to me—the friends doing likewise. In this way I have built up a big practice. People can rely absolutely upon my work.

THEATRE VOYONS

Today the Theatre Voyons shows "At the Threshold of Life," a motion picture made by the Edison company in conjunction with the National Kindergarten society, and one of the most pleasing of this company's educational pictures. It tells a story full of interest to every parent and school worker, and its lesson is a good one for anyone. The big feature of the Pathé Weekly is the view of the lighthouse Maine as it shows the destruction caused by the explosion of the mine and the ravages of the sea during her fifteen years' immersion in salt water. Views of Count Zeppelin's dirigible balloon, carrying many passengers and of the czar of Russia visiting a school in St. Petersburg are also most interesting.

Good time, best music, Asso., tonight.

RUNNING FOR MAYOR

NEWPORT, WASH., WOMAN ANNOUNCES HER CANDIDACY

SEATTLE, Oct. 19.—Mrs. Clara A. Wright, wife of a rural mail carrier living at Newport, Wash., has caused consternation in the ranks of the politicians of that thriving city by filing as a candidate for mayor at the coming election on a citizens' ticket. She is being received on all sides with congratulations on her pluck. The politicians admit that her chances are excellent as the women voters are united on her election. She is only 25 years old, of prepossessing and winning appearance. She is the mother of three children and every minute she can spare from her home and her children is given to advancing the cause of women's suffrage. She has announced that all appointive offices will be filled by women, even to the chief of police. She promises, if elected, to clean out Newport from top to bottom. She stopped making bread yesterday long enough to discuss her platform with a reporter, and when the interview was closed went back making bread. She refused to pose for a picture, saying that there would be plenty of time for that when she is elected mayor.

CADDIE ASKS $10,000

Says Skull Was Broken With Golf Club

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—While holding an umbrella over the head of Joseph G. Jones on the golf links of the Commonwealth Country club, John E. Waters, a caddie, alleges he was hit on the head with a golf club by his employer and he seeks $10,000 damages for injuries. The case went to trial yesterday before Judge Dana and a jury in the superior court.

The plaintiff was 12 years old at the time of the accident, May 9, 1903. The defendant is in the insurance business. He lives in Brookline.

The plaintiff alleges that on the day mentioned part of his duty was to hold an open umbrella over the defendant to protect him from the rain while the defendant was playing golf. While thus engaged and in the exercise of due care, he alleges, he was hit on the head, causing a fracture of his skull and injuries of a permanent nature.

He alleges the defendant was negligent in his conduct toward him.

MAN DIED SUDDENLY

A Well Known French Resident Passed Away Today

A rather sudden death occurred early this morning, when Mr. Charles L. Oulmet, a well known and highly esteemed resident of this city, passed away at his home, 51 Ware street. Although Mr. Oulmet had been ill for over a year, his death was far from being expected, for yesterday he was feeling well and went out for his usual walk. Last night he retired at his usual hour, being in the best of mood, and shortly after 12 o'clock, he was seized with heart failure, and although Dr. R. A. Bennett was called, the unfortunate man passed away before his arrival.

Mr. Oulmet was one of the best known citizens of this city, having lived here for over 30 years. He was always a great factor in the French movements and always took an active part in the church work, especially in St. Joseph's parish, of which he was a member for years before the Notre Dame de Lourdes parish was founded. Deceased was 64 years, 2 months and 6 days old, and for two years he was manager of the Union market in Middlesex street, having resigned his position last January on account of failing health. He leaves to mourn his loss a bereaved wife and six children. Mrs. Pierre Velleux, Mrs. Charles Townsend and Miss Blanche Oulmet of Lowell; Rev. Edouard Oulmet, O. M. I., of Peabody, Mass.; Charles L. Oulmet of Chicago and Alfred Oulmet of Foxboro, Mass. He was a member of La Societe St. Jean Baptiste.

The project has been under way for many years and about a year ago the Blackwater River Co. was incorporated in New Hampshire to develop

THE CHINESE ARMY

Is Said to Have Met With Serious Reverses

PEKING, Oct. 19.—The court official announcement this morning that telegraphic communication with Hankow had been interrupted since sunset last night caused consternation throughout the capital today. The wildest rumors of reverses to the imperial army spread like wildfire although no definite facts to support them were available. Much significance was attached to the fact that the government has refrained from issuing any official announcement of a victory in yesterday's engagement with the rebels.

Among the foreigners, who may be regarded as impartial observers, it is generally believed that the situation at Hankow has not been appreciably improved by the events of the past 24 hours.

Government officials continue to profess the utmost optimism. They declare that the severance of telegraphic communication for a period of 12 or 18 hours over a line 650 miles long is no ground for apprehension. They insist that the 21,000 troops and the 70 guns which have left here for Hankow should be sufficient to swamp any revolutionary attack. Some of the rumors current today, however, hint at disaffection in the army.

Yuan Shi Kai is expected to start tomorrow for Hankow to assume the viceroyalty in the district formerly known as Hu Kiang province but now divided into the provinces of Hu Pei and Hu Nan.

The movement of troops southward is proceeding smoothly. The railroad is rigorously guarded by provincial troops.

Official circles minimize the importance of yesterday's fighting at Hankow, describing it as a preliminary skirmish which forced the rebels to retreat. Narratives of Hankow claim that the rebels are deserting.

An imperial edict today places all naval and military forces in the region of the Yang Tse Kiang under the control of Yuan Shi Kai, who is directed to initiate rigorous punishment upon the rebel ring leaders and to appeal to the "misguided and coerced rebels" to renew their allegiance to the state.

THE AUTHORITIES ARE ALARMED AT THE REVOLUTIONARY OUTBREAKS

CANTON, Oct. 19.—The authorities here, alarmed at the revolutionary outbreak in Wu Chang and Hankow, are making elaborate preparations to prevent any similar movement here. As an emergency measure, the importation of large quantities of arms and ammunition has been ordered. The Hong Kong gunboat was despatched to Tung Kung today to convey a shipment of war stores to this city.

HURT GOING TO WEDDING

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The wedding of Miss Marjorie Livingston White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston White of Hastings-on-the-Hudson, to William C. Egan, of Ardsley-on-the-Hudson, was delayed an hour yesterday afternoon because of an automobile accident.

The machine skidded and hit a telephone pole. Mrs. Egan, Mrs. Hopkins, of Carmel, N. Y., and Miss Sever were thrown out and so badly injured that they were taken to the Dobbs Ferry Hospital. Mr. Egan was severely shaken up and cut about the face, but, after being treated, hastened to the wedding.

THE PRISON CONGRESS

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 19.—Tuberculosis among prisoners was the first topic of discussion before the American Prison congress here today.

A paper by Frank Moore, superintendent of the state reformatory at Rahway, N. J., treated the question of reforming those whose moral delinquencies might be traceable to mental defects.

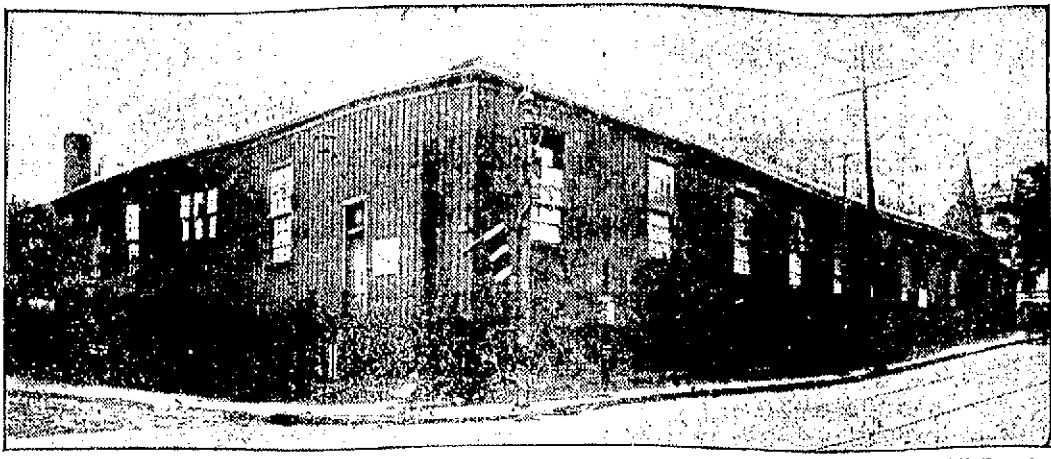

One of the most interesting contributions to the discussion was the report of Commissioner Eva Booth of the Salvation Army, chairman of the standing committee of discharged prisoners.

Baltimore was agreed upon last night as the meeting place of the congress of 1912.

TEMPORARY CHURCH OF ST. PETER'S PARISH

The temporary church of St. Peter's parish which was offered for sale this afternoon was built about 20 years ago. After the old St. Peter's church site was sold to the U. S. government for a post office site the people of the parish worshipped in the temporary church for a number of years until the present St. Peter's church was completed. The temporary church was erected by the late James W. Bennett.

The property was knocked down for $750, and it is understood that it was purchased for P. J. Riley.

WORK IS PROGRESSING

Contractor Tearing Down the Hamilton Wall Building

The work of tearing down the old brick buildings in Central street, formerly used by the Hamilton Mfg. Co., which is the site of the proposed Broadway building, is progressing rapidly, and it is expected by the end of next week that the buildings will have been dismantled.

While a gang of men is engaged in tearing down the buildings, masons are at work putting in a new brick wall which will separate the mill property from the new buildings, while others are putting in a retaining wall for the sidewalk in Central street.

Men are also engaged in excavating and making cement bases for the pillars which will sustain the building.

The fact that one of the two tall chimneys used by the Hamilton has been left standing is the cause of many rumors, one of which is that as soon as the buildings have been torn down the chimney is to be undermined and allowed to topple over on the premises.

In conversation with a representative of the Sun this afternoon the foreman in charge of the work said that if the chimney was farther away from the street it might be feasible to do such a thing, but if an attempt of that kind was made with a chimney so near the street it might smash considerable glass in the vicinity.

The reason the chimney is left standing is that it does not take up as much room standing as it would if torn down and the premises filled with brick. When the time for dismantling the chimney comes it will be taken down in much the same manner as was the other one.

The plaintiff was Edward McMulkin, a Boston florist, who resides in Marsh-

She declares that when the conductor brought her these articles he exhibited them to the passengers, much to her mortification.

What the College Teams Are Doing

CAMBRIDGE, Oct. 19.—Rain and a muddy, slippery field bothered Harvard not at all Tuesday afternoon, the players not even going to the cage for signal drill. The blackboard session was specially long, and so was the work on plays in the stadium. Corbett working out two sets of backs before the varsity was sent into a scrimmage against the second team.

The freshman team at Harvard this fall looks like a dandy, but the boys were nervous against the regulars. However, with the bad footing and the slippery ball the freshmen were able to score on the freshmen only once, the one touchdown being scored by Bud Smith, who running from his position slid around the freshmen's right wing for 20 yards. The freshmen attack made little headway, their only brilliant play being made by Buckley, who intercepted a forward pass that Potter was making to Smith, and running from his own 30 yard line past the middle of the field. A kick then sent the varsity back to its 10 yard line, from where Potter, standing under the goal, got away a 50 yard kick. Gardner recovering the ball when fumbled by the freshmen.

Capt. Fisher was on the field Tuesday, but not dressed for play. He hurt his knee Saturday and was worried a bit Monday although he worked. Tuesday the scare was over and Fisher was back in the lineup yesterday. Fisher has played football 10 years at school and college and never has been taken out of the game because of an injury. Yesterday H. Kinsburg, a former varsity guard, who coached two years ago under Haughton, will begin a two weeks' session at Cambridge as coach for the guards. Capt. Fisher is looking for more line material and has Jim Wray's request to take Goodale, who stroked the freshman crew last year and who played on the freshman line last fall.

THE YALE ELEVEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 19.—There were many shifts in the Yale lineup Tuesday, shifts which are expected to hold for some time. The coaches waited until Paul had come back to scrimmaging before they made them. Then they put Paul in at his old tackle position, shifted Francis from guard to end, put Childs in at guard and Cooney in at center. Freeman, who has been doing well at halfback on the scrum team, was put at halfback on the varsity Tuesday. Kelly and Anderson being the other backs, with Spalding in for a little while. Merrill played through the scrimmage at quarterback, while Capt. Howe followed the team with the coaches.

Childs, at varsity guard Tuesday for the first time, played a hard game and no one got through him. When the varsity had the ball he proved a very aggressive guard. Francis did well at end and Avery, who was at left end, didn't let anyone get through him. The only scoring in the scrimmage was done by Freeman, who made a touchdown.

Thomas L. St. Germain, the Indian player, arrived in New Haven Tuesday and is eligible for the Yale team. He helped coach last year. He played in the line in a western college some years ago. He has been in the employ of the government recently. Philbia was in the signal drill at halfback Tuesday and will probably play that position again at West Point, as his shoulder is getting better. The coaches at the field Tuesday were Walter Camp, Jack Field, Buck Morris, Arthur

Bridges, Earl O. Kistler, Dewitt Cochran, Ted Lilley, Phil Smith, Dr. William T. Bull, Paul Veeder and Charles Chadwick.

AT CORNELL

IITHACA, Oct. 19.—The process of strengthening the Cornell football team Tuesday took the form of a redivision of the Reds and Blues, as the varsity and scrubs are known. Half a dozen first string varsity men were put over on the Blues, and this eleven was strong enough as a consequence to heat the varsity in the scrimmage by two touchdowns to one. In addition to Munns, who has been playing right guard; Williamson, a sub tackle, and Fritz, one of the ends, the scrubs had the services of a good many leaders of the varsity back field, including Butler, Collins, McCormick and Underhill. On the Red team Byrich and Stinson played ends, Krogh and Chapman tackles; Dehner, the old varsity man who was not been in the first lineup in two weeks, and Weldenenthal, who has been a sub all season, guards; White center Smith, quarterback, O'Connor and Hawkins halfbacks and Cass, another sub, fullback. Guyer was not brought out into the varsity lineup until very late in the day. Another varsity man who was "there" Tuesday was O'Connor, at left half. He carried the ball in most of the varsity gains, was fast and sure and his dodging was clever. The interference of the backs on both teams was better than usual.

O'Connor scored the first touchdowns of the game by an end run after the Reds had gained through the Blues line for a number of plays. To show that he was getting back his form Butler took the ball on a quarterback run around Stinson for the second touchdown after Collins' line dashes had given him a good chance. One of the best outside kicks of the year gave Fritz a chance for a fifty yard run and a second touchdown for the Blues.

COACH SAVAGE PLEASED

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 19.—Coach Savage was visibly pleased with the performance of Gen. Miles, '12, in the Amherst backfield Tuesday. With the captain of the track team back in the lineup and another speedy halfback in Connolly at right half prospects begin to seem hopeful again. In a twenty minute scrimmage, the varsity took the ball from the 40 yard line against the freshmen and scored four times in successive attempts. Capt. Marden was not on the field and his place was taken by Browne, '12, temporarily. Proudfoot suffered a slight injury to his ankle at right end, but otherwise there were no mishaps. Cook, '12, has not been tried in the backfield as yet but is learning the signals. If he makes good with his weight, speed and hard tackling McCay will very likely be relegated to the second squad. The coaches are in a hole over a man to fill left tackle and Tuesday a new senior, Cushman, was tried out. Bauman, '12, will fill this gap temporarily if he recovers from his injury by the Harvard game.

THE NAVY PLAYERS

ANNAPOLIS, Oct. 19.—Rather than take any chances of not having its full strength for the final game against the Army team the Navy coaches have the eleven enter the game against Princeton next Saturday with Capt. Dalton and its tactics Brown and Davis. None of the three was in the game either Monday or Tuesday and though it is hoped that they will be in shape for the big local contest no chances of losing their services will be taken. Rudman is playing a strong game at right tackle, Davis' old place, but Leonard cannot do the line breaking work of Dutton, nor can Ralston fill Big Brown's place acceptably. All three of the players are suffering with bad legs. Jarman played in Weems' place at center Tuesday afternoon.

AT WEST POINT

WEST POINT, Oct. 19.—The rain Tuesday caused drill to be dispensed with and the coaches seized upon the extra time and contrary to the usual program drove the men through a long scrimmage until it was so dark the players were hardly visible. The first line was unable to cross the scrubs for any great length against the strong defense of the second string. There were flashes of brilliant individual playing, both Dean and Hyatt doing some good gaining in running back punts. The defense of the varsity was strong and Arnold and Devore both stopped plays before they could get started. The forward pass was tried repeatedly, but without success. A full pass during the afternoon. Hyatt was replaced by Keyes at quarterback and made two drop kicks. One from the 40 yard line just missed the goal and the other from the 35 yard line fell short.

WORTHEN ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

The members of the Worthen Street Baptist church held their first social of the season last night in the vestry of the church. A supper was served at 6.30 and the following entertainment program was given: Readings, Miss Helen Mansfield, Masters Harry and Harold Merrill, and songs by William Mansfield and J. A. Stevens, accompanied by Carl Mason. The new president of the Ladies' Social Circle, Mrs. George Snow, was charged, assisted by Mrs. Parly, Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Myers, Mrs. Nutting, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Dunn.

HERE'S THE MAN WHOSE HOME RUNS BEAT GIANTS TWO GAMES IN THE WORLD'S SERIES

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 19.—J. Franklin Baker, the Athletics' third baseman, whose home run drives in the second and third games of the world's series were each instrumental in the Giants' defeat, is a product of the eastern shore of Maryland, hailing from Trappe, Talbot county. He was born in 1886 and is nearly six feet tall and weighs 175 pounds. He has batted upon one day to cover third base. His performance was such a notable one that Baker never again entered the pitcher's box. He was gathered in by the Baltimore Orioles of the Eastern league, but was dissatisfied with his berth and quit. Frank returned to his home on the Chesapeake and later became a member of the Reading (Pa.) team of the Tri-State league. It was while playing for Reading that he made his reputation by being the best third baseman and hitter in that league. Manager Mack got on the job, and the rest of the story is familiar to all followers of the national sport.

His singles have totalled nearly 200. Like most baseball players Connie Mack has developed into stars, Baker had little besides a terrific wallop with the wagon tongue to recommend him when he was spotted by one of Manager Mack's scouts. While in the Eastern Shore league Baker was a pitcher. It was through the scarcity of utility men that Baker was called upon one day to cover third base. His performance was such a notable one that Baker never again entered the

He Was Held Up by Two Men Near Hood Farm

Joseph Hawkins, a driver and collector for the Gulf Refining company, was held up and assaulted by two men on the river road near Hood farm late yesterday afternoon and undoubtedly would have been robbed if it had not been for the fact that an approaching wagon frightened the men away. The local police were notified but inasmuch as it is out of the jurisdiction of the local department all that could be done was to inform the members of the department to be on the lookout for two suspicious characters and notify the police of neighboring cities and towns. Hawkins' regular route includes trips to Lawrence, and yesterday he went to the down-river city and made collections and had considerable money on his person when he left that city. He was driving his horses slowly along the road when upon reaching a point near Hood farm he saw two men standing in the middle of the road. They stopped him and one asked how far it was to Lawrence. Hawkins informed him and then the other man approached and asked the distance to Lowell, but before Hawkins could answer he was seized by the leg and dragged from his seat. The two thugs bent Hawkins over the wheel of his wagon, but before they could get hold of his money he swung the whip which he still held in his hand and knocked one of the culprits down. Hawkins then struggled with the other man when an approaching team scared the two men away. They ran down the river road, while Hawkins drove to Hood farm and telephoned to the Lowell police.

SUES FOR $10,000

Woman Was Struck by an Automobile

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Claiming $10,000 damages, Miss Anna Robertson, formerly of Portland, Me., who was struck and seriously injured by an automobile belonging to Fire Commissioner Daily on Sept. 21, 1910, has brought suit in the Suffolk superior court against the commissioner and his chauffeur, William J. Connolly.

Interesting legal questions are involved in this case in view of the fact that the city is liable for an accident caused by any of its fire apparatus. If the plaintiff should recover a judgment against Connolly, the chauffeur, or the claim be settled by him, the city could legally reimburse him for any amount which the fire commissioner would recommend.

Another question arises as to whether the fire commissioner is a member of the fire department. The plaintiff claims that if he is a member of the department, any judgment against him can be reimbursed on his own recommendation, and that if he is not a member of the department while responding to a second alarm of fire, he is personally liable for an accident caused by his machine.

It is thought that this is the first case brought to court in recent years where an effort is made to hold the head of a department or a member of the fire department for injuries caused by any of the apparatus of the department. Miss Robertson, the plaintiff, was in the City hospital from September until the following March. Upon leaving the hospital a bill for $507.33 was sent her by the city of Boston. She paid this bill and now seeks to recover her expenses and other damages caused by suffering and loss of earnings. She was employed as a stenographer in the office of a State street broker at the time of her accident.

THREE DOLLARS PER YEAR. TWENTY-FIVE CENTS PER MONTH

The supreme court has sustained the regulation of the Boston and Maine railroad, excluding dogs from passenger cars but providing for their transportation in the baggage cars on payment of fare. Any other regulation would be wrong and even dangerous to the traveling public.

The elimination of chicken from the rations of the American soldier and the limitation of turkey to Thanksgiving and Christmas will effect a saving of $52,000. These changes can be made without detriment to the soldier for it is almost a certainty that the chicken supplied to the army is of the cold storage kind.

THE WATER BOARD

The board of aldermen is right in taking the water board to task for the inferior quality of the water furnished to the city. The people have borne with the disagreeable conditions long enough and want to know what is to be done to provide a pure water supply. The city is paying for good water but it is not getting it. It is, therefore, in order to have the water board tell why this state of affairs has been allowed to continue so long or what is to be done to correct it in the shortest possible time.

THE USUAL RESULT

The death of an eight-year-old boy at Saco, Me., Tuesday, as a result of the accidental discharge of a gun in the hands of a boy of fifteen, is another object lesson in the foolishness of allowing boys to handle shot-guns or even revolvers. The boy who shot the other is heart-broken of course, but that does not mend matters. The thing is to prevent such accidents, and it can be done only by forbidding boys to handle dangerous weapons. That is the one precaution that is not taken until after the shooting occurs.

LANGTRY WOULD RETAIN THE MACHINE

Secretary of State Langtry, being a machine politician, is, therefore, opposed to the abolition of party machines as proposed under the new charter. It was Langtry who got the state into such a ridiculous mess through errors in the official ballot in the state primaries. He is one of those men who while mismanaging his own affairs presumes to be able to tell other people all about their business. He is a part of the republican machine and evidently has some apprehension that under the new form of city charter which eliminates the party designations, he would lose his pull. That is another argument in favor of the new charter.

FOR VOTING MACHINES

At the state election the citizens of Massachusetts will have to vote upon the question whether or not they favor the adoption of voting machines. If the machines are capable of correctly counting ballots and registering the number of votes, then by all means they should be adopted. The state of affairs shown in the recent Maine election is an indication that present methods are very unreliable. With voting machines we believe the count would be more quickly and more accurately made. It would be much easier to detect an error in the work of a machine than in that of an incompetent counter. The time is not far distant when every polling booth will have its voting machine to do the counting.

THE SCHOOL FRATERNITIES

The secret wedding of two pupils of the Brockton high school has caused quite a sensation in that city. The contracting parties have been members of secret fraternities connected with the school, and this result furnishes another proof of the danger of such societies in connection with high schools. The young couple, it is said, had been sweethearts since childhood, but it seems that their attendance at the high school gave them an opportunity to be together, and the fact that they were married six months before their secret leaked out, shows how little the parents and teachers know about what is going on among the pupils. The high schools that have abolished the fraternities have cast off a fruitful source of demoralization in many directions.

THE CAMPAIGN

The republicans have been in the heat of their campaign for the past two weeks, but Governor Foss has not yet started on his campaign tour. We are informed that from next Saturday until the polls close, there will be something doing on the democratic end.

The burden of the republican tale of woe is foreign to this state. It is a cry of coming calamity unless the republican trusts are protected by the present high tariff. Governor Foss will deal with state issues. He will show wherein the state has been benefited by his administration; he will point out what he has accomplished in one year despite republican opposition, and he will show what he will accomplish in another year if retained at the helm of the ship of state. He has done much for the metropolitan district in securing better transportation facilities through an extension of tunnels, subways and the consolidation of the West End and Boston Elevated roads. Most of the important acts of the legislature for the present year were adopted through his initiative and recommended in his inaugural address. All these measures were signed by Governor Foss, whereas many of them were opposed by Mr. Frothingham, the republican candidate. Mr. Frothingham's record is a negative one. He voted against progressive measures brought forward by other men, but he has not shown the originality or the constructive ability to produce any important measure himself.

Governor Foss is a progressive candidate, and he stands upon a progressive platform, whereas Frothingham represents the unprogressive element or the standpat policy in the republican party. While he lacks the ability that a candidate for governor should possess, he has repeatedly taken a stand against popular measures that are now on the statute books. From Foss to Frothingham would be to exchange a policy of progress for one of retrogression and the support of every combination that seeks to accumulate wealth through special privilege and the plunder of the people.

SEEN AND HEARD

The new room for Poles, in the Greenbridge evening school, the first to be established in the city, is a success. Pupils and the teachers speak highly of their new class of pupils. The Polish pupils, it seems, unlike some of the others, give considerable care to their personal appearance before attending evening school and appear at school "all dressed up," though to do so they must have to hustle as most of them work in the city until nearly six o'clock, while the evening schools open at 7. They are anxious to learn and are correspondingly quick to learn.

How small the world is after all. A certain Lowell man who is attending the world's series, entered the Polo grounds amid a crush of strangers Tuesday, never expecting to see a familiar face amid the moving multitude. He had hardly got inside when he beheld another Lowell man and a friend of his perched high up on the bleachers waiting for the fun to start.

"Touching" candidates is likely to become a lost art under the new election laws. Even if a candidate were disposed to take kindly to a "touch" he will hardly dare take a chance. It will be a rough blow on the professional "touchers" who thrive at this time of year.

When a woman loves a man, she will do anything for him. When she doesn't, a pair of oars couldn't get her to do the right thing—that is what the man thinks is right.

How quickly some people get when they think they are being catered to! They want the earth, with chaff on over silk, and the grave lined with white cloth.

Man should not be blamed for everything. The woman who forgets the man to whom she has pledged her affection, and does the fool things, has something to learn from her attic. A woman can live just as fast as any man living—but then, one expects too much from a woman anyway, and her slips appear more monstrous.

If some women's hair were as pretty as their voices, as they chatter over the phone, the Sutherland sisters wouldn't be in it for a minute.

When a man has half a keg of beer slopping around in his stomach, he generally has a kick against the city for building the curbstones so high.

One of the great events in the life of a young girl is when she has her first sweater. Cleopatra on her barge, with a green striped duck canopy, was never half so proud.

The man who hustles when it comes time to shake the furnace had noble ancestors at the pass of Thermopylae.

Hot water bottles are good bedfellows. They don't take up all the room, don't talk back, don't snore and keep right on working. They are fine company for cold feet.

But how about it in the cold, gray dawn of the morning after? Ay, there's the rub. For what may be a warm comforter in the early watches of the night, may be, nay is, a cold and clammy thing to be kicked out of bed without fear or remorse long before the coming of dawn. There's the consideration that must give us pause. The hot water bottle undoubtedly has its place in the economy of modern civilization, but the victim of the habit.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

No. Adams Express: The war against the sale of bad eggs in New York to the bakers is being waged by the department of health of that city. In one bakery three and one-half cans of liquid eggs with partially hatched chickens were found. As a result of the investigation by the board of health of New York city sixteen cases will appear on the sanitary calendar of the court of special sessions.

People who patronize bakeries cannot be too vigilant in trying to find out what kind of food they are buying. Pure and well cooked food is essential to the health of all, but when rotten eggs are used in baking the food the health of all those who eat it is imperiled. Not only in New York city, but in every city in the country the boards of health should make a thorough inspection of all bakeries to see if they are conforming to the laws of cleanliness and are using pure ingredients for their cookery.

BARRING THE AFFINITIES

Newport News: Judge Orr of the district court at Reno, Nev., deserves the praise of the entire country on account of his declaration that when it becomes known to the court that the plaintiff in a divorce action has an "affinity" he will refuse to act in the case. It is estimated that of the number of applicants for divorce coming to Reno from outside the state, fully sixty per cent. are either accompanied by affinities, with whom they spend much of their time during the average of eight months there, or have affinities waiting elsewhere. The increasing number of such cases, as well as of re-marrriages within a few hours following the granting of decrees, has been recognized by the courts, but hitherto there has been little attempt to stop the practice.

TAFI AND THE NOMINATION

Johnstown Democrat: We take nothing back regarding the point that Mr. Tafi was not the popular choice for the republican nomination in that year and that he was literally jammed through by the power of the Roosevelt administration. The great vote which he actually polled in the election was a tribute to the Roosevelt prestige rather than any distinct triumph for Mr. Tafi himself.

The situation is very different in 1911. Three years ago there was a well defined split in the republican party. It was not then engaged in an internal struggle such as that now raging between insurgent and standard-bearer. Mr. Tafi had not then been tried out. He had not been chosen to consort with the Aldrichs, the Smoots and the Dalzells. He had not then called a Ballinger, a Wickersham and a Wilson into his cabinet. He had not then elevated a Justice White over a Justice Harlan to the chief justiceship of the supreme court. Nor had he then packed that great tribunal in favor of a "reasonable" interpretation of the Sherman law against the trusts.

KILLED BY A TRAIN

Flagman at Littleton Victim of Accident

A sad accident occurred yesterday in Littleton, when James McMill was crushed to death by a train. The unfortunate man was flagman at Priest's crossing, and while standing on the east-bound track, flagging a west-bound train, he was struck by a Boston bound train, which it is presumed he did not see coming. Death was instantaneous.

The deceased was about 75 years old and leaves to mourn his loss three sisters, Mary of Littleton with whom he lived, Kate of South Framingham, Bridget of Marlboro; two brothers, Patrick, gate-tender at Littleton station and William of Marlboro. He had been in the employ of the company for a number of years, and strange to say he met his doom at the same place and same manner as his predecessor a few years ago.

BOARDS OF HEALTH

CANNOT COMPEL DEALERS TO KEEP FRUIT COVERED

SALEM, Oct. 18.—In the superior criminal court yesterday afternoon Judge Brown ruled that boards of health in Massachusetts have no power to compel dealers to keep fruit covered from dust when exposed for sale.

The case was that of John Panagakis of Lynn, who was charged with violation of the rule of the board of health of Lynn requiring him to keep fruit covered from the dust when offered for sale.

The case, which was submitted to the court on an agreed statement of facts, was carefully considered. The court ruled that boards of health had no power to make or enforce such regulations, and that the act submitted no offence had been committed. A motion to quash the complaint was allowed.

The decision is of widespread interest, as many fruit dealers, especially in Essex county, have been obliged during the past year to keep fruit covered with screens or cloths at the expense of keeping electric fans.

LOWELL POLICEMAN

Addressed the State Police Association

SALEM, Oct. 19.—Crowned with success in increased membership the past 12 months and a more satisfactory condition of finances than ever before, the 11th annual convention of the Massachusetts Police Association opened in Franklin hall at 2 yesterday afternoon. Bernard J. Phiberty, president of the organization, presided.

The membership is now 1894, an increase of 82 since the preceding convention. The general fund now aggregates $3800. During the past year the sick and mutual aid division paid out $9000 in sick and death benefits. The latter fund now amounts to $1500.

Owing to the weather the outings planned for yesterday afternoon were abandoned.

At the convention yesterday 128 delegates were present from branch associations representing every city in the commonwealth except Boston, many towns and the Metropolitan and Massachusetts district police.

Last evening the delegates and invised guests were tendered a banquet in Franklin hall.

John B. Skinner, assistant city marshal, and chairman of the reception committee, called the banquet to order and introduced William A. Wilson, president of the Salem association, as toastmaster.

Addresses were made by Mayor Adams, Bernard H. Phiberty of Fitchburg, president of the State Association; Judge Sears of the First District court, James M. Keane of Cambridge, secretary of the association; Chief of Police Grady of Peabody, Alderman Schneider of Salem and Edward F. Flanagan of Lowell.

MR. I. L. SHOWEM HAS ANOTHER FINANCIAL DEAL WITH THE COUNT

WHY THE NEW CHARTER

Thomas J. Goyette Gives Result of Investigation

Thomas J. Goyette, of the committee of sixty, has been making a study of city charters. Asked to give The Sun his views upon the new charter, he said:

"There are twenty-one states in the Union that have laws which allow cities the privilege of accepting by referendum a form of commission government. One hundred sixty-five cities have prepared and adopted commission forms of government in the last eight years, and in most every case the reason for changing was on account of financial troubles.

"The charter movement for Lowell is not a movement which originated with any one set of men; it is a popular movement, interesting all kinds of people from all parts of the city, and to be sure there is some opposition similar to the opposition that existed in regard to the adoption of the Australian ballot.

"From a study of the charters I am convinced that the charter proposed for the city of Lowell contains all the latest improvements and is worthy of a trial. In the charters that I have examined I find the number of commissioners vary from three to ten, 25 per cent. of them have five commissioners similar to our plan.

"The salary of the commissioners varies according to the population of the cities, the average running from $2000 to $4000. All cities that have adopted the commission charter have made good with the new system, no city on record being obliged to go back to the former system.

Opposition

The reports from all cities adopting this form of government state that with one exception the mayors and office holders were opposed to a change. The commission government plan has resulted in a better system so that men of the same type elected before did better work. Besides, the people have exercised care in watching the action of the men they selected.

Houston, Texas, with a population of 78,800 is proud of their mayor and board of aldermen. The city paid $100,000 old debt the first year and put the city on a cash basis. The men who are serving the city have had no former political experience. The mayor receives a salary of $4000 a year, but was generous and public spirited, and is known to have expended at least $10,000 of his own money for the benefit of the city and its people. The commission system has worked very well at Houston. In four years' time they have built a $50,000 school; a $75,000 high school; purchased three parks, the total area of which is 38 acres, at a cost of

THOMAS J. GOYETTE.

$73,000; and built a boulevard ten miles long connecting the three parks. They also built a $400,000 public hall, seating 7500 people, and were instrumental in completing a $2,500,000 twenty-foot canal, of which the government will bear half the expense. These undertakings furnished plenty of work and there is no evidence of contract labor and the people of Lowell would not tolerate it.

Tacoma, Washington, is a good example of men securing office that were not qualified, and after an appointment was made which did not satisfy the people, the mayor and the two commissioners voting for this official were recalled.

The percentage of the Lowell charter in reference to the recall is with few exceptions the lowest to be found in any city under the new form of charter.

The city of Wichita, Kansas, offers a good answer to the argument that the recall is not operative. The city had 21,000 voters and they had but little trouble in recalling their mayor and one commissioner. The referendum at 15 per cent is the lowest in the history of charters. The initiative has given a public market to one city. It might be worked so that we might be given a public hall in Lowell.

"These are a few thoughts concerning the condition of cities under the commission form, and I have no hesitancy in declaring for the short ballot, the initiative, the referendum and the recall.

I am firmly convinced that the best interests of our city would be served by the proposed charter.

FOR A HIGH TARIFF

Speakers Plead for Republican Policy

An interesting talk on the protective tariff was given last night at the Citizens American club in Dutton street, but on account of the inclement weather, the attendance was rather small. The speakers of the evening were P. J. Conlon of Boston, and Daniel W. McCarthy of Lawrence. The speakers were listened to with great interest and their remarks were well received by the attentive audience.

Mr. Conlon, who was the main speaker of the evening, said in part: "It is of vital importance that the men of Lowell should understand the tariff as it affects them, as it affects their work, their wages and their welfare in general. In the year ending June, 1910, we imported goods of various kinds to the amount of $300,000,000, imagine the enormous amount of work the manufacturers of these goods would have given to our own people if they were made in this country, as they should have been. These $300,000,000 would almost build another city the size of Lowell. If these goods were made here in this country, it would necessitate the building of great mills, factories, and workshops, and think of the large number of men required to build these structures; and then these great establishments would have to be supplied with machines, and think of the great army of men required for this part of the work; and, finally of the other great army of men required on the railroad for the hauling and shipping of the goods manufactured in these establishments to their destinations.

"And now these great institutions are ready for work. Consider the next great army of men required to operate these huge plants and who will earn, not only for themselves, but for those dependent on them, and incidentally for the whole community. All the above does not apply only to the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, but to all foreign products."

He then discussed the comparative wages of American working men with those of foreign countries, and stated that without the protective tariff, or free trade, it would tend to place the American working men on the same level as those of other countries, who receive much less for their work.

He mentioned this country's great Civil war, and stated that free trade had been the destruction of the Confederacy, and also gave Ireland as an example of what free trade had done. "From being one of the biggest industrial countries in Europe," said the speaker, "Ireland has been reduced to only one industry, and that is the linen and flax industry. All the other flourishing industries were killed, after the great rebellion by the repeal of the protective tariff."

The speakers did not tell the people that it is the high tariff that is responsible for the high cost of living, and that enables the trust to fleece the people of the United States.

CALEDONIAN CLUB

Held Annual Concert and Dancing Party

The annual concert and dancing party of the Lowell Caledonian club was held in Prescott hall last night. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the club, but undoubtedly it would have been much larger but for the heavy downpour of rain which prevented many people from being present. It is needless to say the affair was a success for the club is noted for its excellent social events.

An excellent entertainment program was carried out during the early part of the evening. Mr. Stewart of Haverhill was present and gave several selections on the bagpipes. At the conclusion of the entertainment dancing was started and continued until midnight.

The entertainment program was as follows:
Quartet, "Hail to the Chief."
Argyle Quartet.
Song, "Corn Bloss." Mr. John S. Moir.

Scores of friends were present to offer the couple congratulations and many happy returns of the day. A musical program was carried out during the evening and selections, instrumental and vocal were given by Charles Miller, Horatius Legat, and Miss Florence Kilpatrick. The Misses Jennie Wood, Irene Choate, Helen Choate, Bessie Adams, Mae Whitcomb and Florence Kilpatrick poured. REV. DR. A. A. WRIGHT

Lectured at the Central-ville M. E. Church

Despite the inclement weather a fair audience was on hand at the Centralville M. E. church last night, the occasion being an interesting lecture given by Rev. A. A. Wright, D. D., dean of Boston Correspondence school, who delivered his unique lecture on "How Wide is an Inch?"

The lecture was very interesting and the speaker interspersed his remarks with witty repartees, which delighted the audience.

The principle laid down in the beginning was that standards of authority in opinion and in life are not absolute, but relative; and the speaker demonstrated that this principle holds good in art, in science, in politics, in everything except in the realm of religion, where Christ is an absolute standard of measurement for us all.

By the use of a blackboard he demonstrated that "an" and "down" are relative terms; also, that when, with a straight line, he cut off one corner of the board, he cut off the rest of the board and not the corner. If one saw it that way. In other words, an inch "is as wide as we think it is, and can get other people to think it is. There is nothing that does not "depend." What is an inch? It is one-twelfth of a foot; but what is a foot? Twelve inches. What, then, is an inch? What is cold? It is the absence of heat; but what, then, is heat? We have a Scotch inch, an Irish inch, an English inch and an American inch; and a yardstick may be 35 inches long. In religion only, the inch mark is not what you think it is, and can get other people to think it is; nor what other people think it is; nor what other people think it is. Christ is the absolute standard, when applied to opinion and to life.

MISSIONARY SPOKE

She Told About the Work in China

Miss Mary Slinester of the Methodist mission at Cheng-Tu in Western China, gave a very interesting lecture at the Highland Methodist church last night, on the progress which the Methodist missionaries in that portion of China have made in the education and Christianization of the Chinese women and girls.

This lecture was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary society of the Highland M. E. church. The meeting opened at 8 o'clock with a hymn and reading and then prayer was recited by Rev. Arthur Bonner, Ph. D., pastor of the church.

Miss Slinester's lecture was briefly as follows:
"I am going to speak to you very informally this evening on the work which the Methodist mission in western China has been doing among the women and girls in that great region of China. My work in Cheng-Tu has been entirely among the women and girls and before I go any further I would like to give you a talk on the life of these Eastern women which will explain why my work has been confined to them alone."

"Most of you have some idea of the life of Eastern women, the enforced seclusion and lack of any opportunity for intellectual development. These conditions prevailed in China until within the last few years when the government opened its great schools and universities modeled to a very great extent on the theories followed in the western systems of education. Up to the time of the opening of the government schools the life of Chinese women was almost inconceivably wretched. When a girl married she entered her husband's home and only at extremely rare intervals did she venture the walls of her home. Some of these homes consist of only a single room, dark and damp, the floor of damp stone, the walls covered with cobwebs and the only light is that which is reflected down through a little airway. She was never allowed to appear on the streets and consequently it was well nigh impossible to do anything to better her condition, for we couldn't go to her nor she to us.

"But when the Chinese government opened its schools and colleges to the women this old seclusion was broken and now they appear on the streets with comparative freedom. But even in our schools a great partition runs down through the hall on one side of which the men sit, on the other the women. And the women missionaries work only among the women, the men among the men.

"We have two very great difficulties to meet in our work: one is the almost inevitable ignorance of the women whose minds seem almost incapable of understanding what we are trying to do, and the other is the incapability of the Chinese mind to change from the old to something new except after a long, tedious process. But among the girls the work is almost inspiring. They are very eager and quick to learn. They can commit whole chapters of the Bible with the greatest ease and through this very fact we have reached thousands whom we would otherwise have been unable to reach, for these girls when at home repeat these chapters which we have taught them and thus the women they have learned and their parents very naturally become interested, and we have made many converts in this way.

"The great importance of this work among the girls cannot be over-emphasized. We maintain a boarding school for girls, the larger proportion of whom are adopted directly by us, and in China, as you probably know, there are two methods of arranging a marriage in neither of which the girl has any say about her wishes in the matter: one method is that by which the parents of the young couple arrange the marriage without either of the two directly concerned having seen each other; the second method is that by which the young man having seen the young girl for just a moment some time, has recourse to a middlewoman, who secures an introduction for him to her parents and he arranges for the marriage with their consent. Now in our mission school we marry the girls in our care to Christian young men only, and generally to workers in the mission field. In this way we have established several mission stations having native workers in charge, and it would be very hard to give you a full conception of the results they have done and are accomplishing. But it is through their efficient efforts that the work has assumed such inspiring outlook.

"It costs about $25 to support, clothe and educate one of these girls for a year, and after they go out into the mission field, the cost of their support is but $40 a year. It is hard to conceive of any place where one can get such a return for the money expended. Your missionary work here may be discouraging to you at times; you may feel that you are able to do so little of what you would like to accomplish, but I want to tell you that I believe that it is the little bands of the faithful in our missionary societies who are keeping that great work going, and I want to thank and congratulate you on the great work you have done and are doing."

STEEL CORPORATION

Has Decided to Terminate Its Ore Lease

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The United States Steel corporation will cancel its lease of the Great Northern ore properties, one of the largest leases of the kind which the corporation holds. The rumor, current in Wall street yesterday, was confirmed after business hours in official sources, which declined to be quoted.

When the lease will be terminated is undetermined. The terms of the contract stipulate that the lease shall continue until all the ore is exhausted, unless on Jan. 15, 1915 the lease is abrogated under the option reserved by the lessee, and should the lessee, so determine, two years' notice shall be given.

The Great Northern properties aggregating to estimates have deposits of 300,000,000 tons of iron ore. Officials of the steel corporation refused to give the reasons for the cancellation of the big lease and this phase was a matter of conjecture in Wall street.

No figures are available as to how much ore has been mined since the opening of the Great Northern properties. The lease provides that the corporation must mine 150,000 tons more each successive year, and that the specified amount of ore must be paid for, whether it is mined or not.

Under this provision the corporation would be required to mine 3,750,000 tons during the present year, or at least pay for that amount, which would mean $3,697,500.

The iron ore properties of the Great Northern railroad were transferred in 1906 to Louis W. Hill, James N. Hill and Walter J. Hill as trustees, the 1,500,000 shares of beneficial interest in the trust, equal to the number of shares of stock held, being issued December 5, 1906, to Great Northern stockholders.

Before Allowing an Operation

Please Read These Two Letters.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will prove how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before. Then after all that suffering Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored her health.

HERE IS HER OWN STATEMENT.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief, and at last sent me to an Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. To-day I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise every woman who is afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. Orville Rock, R. B. No. 5, Paw Paw, Mich.

"There never was a worse case." Rockport, Ind.—"There never was a worse case of woman's ills than mine, and I cannot begin to tell you what I suffered. For over two years I was not able to do anything. I was in bed for a month and the doctor said nothing but an operation would cure me. My father suggested Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; so to please him I took it, and I improved wonderfully, so I am able to travel, ride horseback, take long rides and never feel any ill effects from it. I can only say that I advise every woman to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation."—Mrs. Margaret Meredith, R. F. D. No. 3, Rockport, Ind.

We will pay a handsome reward to any person who will prove to us that these letters are not genuine and truthful—or that either of these women were paid in any way for their testimonials, or that the letters are published without their permission, or that the original letter from each did not come to us entirely unsolicited.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit. Discussed at the Firemen's State Convention Today

LAWRENCE, Oct. 19.—Fire fighters from all parts of the state heard addresses on civil service and statute laws governing firemen and fire methods of fighting fires and discussions of the apparatus at today's session of the Massachusetts State Firemen's association at city hall. Blumer Curtis, a member of the board of civil service commissioners in Boston, spoke on "Opinions of what advantages will accrue from the adoption of the new rule requiring competitive examinations for official positions in the Boston fire department and the holding of conference meetings with the heads of departments and citizens generally in cities and towns of the state."

Other addresses were by the Rev. Allan Hudson of Brockton on "How to improve firemen. Intellectually and mentally," Lieut. Martin Kennedy of the Boston fire department on "Operation and care of fire apparatus," Chief Henry A. Turner of Chelsea, Arthur Brooks of Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Civil Service League and Thomas Roosa of Boston on "What good has the civil service done the fire departments of the state," Captain Brophy on "The use of gasoline as motive power on fire apparatus," and C. A. Young of Boston on "Comparative merits of solid and pneumatic tires on combination fire autos."

Reports from officers and committees were heard.

Tonight's meeting will be addressed by State Forester Ranc, State Fire Warden Hutchins, Deputy Chief Daley of Brockton and the Rev. James T. O'Reilly of Lawrence.

Yesterday Afternoon's Session

Nearly 200 delegates were present yesterday afternoon in the city hall when President George L. Johnson of Waltham called the 2nd annual convention of the Massachusetts State Firemen's association to order, and Mayor John T. Cahill turned over the key of the city to the visiting fire fighters. The convention which time and tomorrow program has been arranged for the benefit of the out-of-town guests.

President Johnson greeted the delegates with a few words in which he introduced Mayor Cahill. The mayor arose amidst a burst of applause and welcomed the visitors.

Chief D. E. Carey welcomed the delegates as follows:

"The mayor has already given you a cordial welcome to our city and as chief of the Lawrence fire department and in behalf of the firemen of this city I extend to the delegates and their friends a most hearty welcome to the city of Lawrence. The members of the fire department and the citizens have provided a program for your entertainment that I hope will please you all. His Honor, the mayor, has given you the great key of the city and I extend to you the freedom of the several fire stations of this city that you may visit them and feel that you are at home amongst your brothers of the same occupation. The printed program will be distributed to the delegates and any other entertainment that may be provided later will be announced from this platform."

"At any time during this convention that any delegate may need information in any of the fire stations are called by telephone the desired information will be given. Trusting that our program as arranged will not interfere with your sessions in this hall, I again extend to you in behalf of the firemen of Lawrence a most hearty welcome."

"I will now give the key of the city to you," said the mayor, turning over the large brass key, 18 inches long and weighing eight pounds to President Johnson. Here the mayor was applauded again and he sat down weath'ered in smiles.

Ex-Chief J. R. Hopkins of Somerville in reply to Mayor Cahill said:

"Mr. Mayor, in behalf of the Massachusetts Firemen's association, I thank you for your cordial welcome. Your city has a population of 30,000 inhabitants, a large portion of whom are willing toilers."

"The city of Lawrence has a good and efficient fire department. According to the U. S. census for 1910 of 10 cities in Massachusetts having a population of 60,000, Lawrence has the lowest per capita cost, that of Boston being $2.17, and that of Lawrence being $1.18."

"Mr. Mayor, I again thank you for your hearty greeting, and wish abundant prosperity to the good of the city of Lawrence."

Captain Brophy, of Boston, one of the best known fire fighters in the state, also made a reply to Mayor Cahill's welcome in which he thanked the mayor for the freedom of the city.

The following credential committee was appointed by the chair: Chief T. F. Murnane, Fitchburg; Captain John F. McEneaney, Springfield; and George S. Tidmarsh, Ashland.

The report of the committee was accepted without reading. The question of appointing a nominating committee at the present time caused some discussion when John J. Kelley, of Lawrence, made a motion that the appointment of the nominating committee be deferred until Friday when more delegates would be present. John T. Larter, of this city, seconded the motion. The discussion was entered into by many of the delegates, some wanting the nominating committee abolished entirely and having the nominations made from the floor as the present form was too much one-man power, while others preferred to put in the old way. The motion was put to a vote and the report of the committee was accepted.

A splendid address on "Massachusetts State Firemen's association and its influence for good from a legislator's standpoint," by Hon. Frank P. Bennett, Jr., of Saugus, Mass., was heard after which a rising vote of thanks was tendered the speaker. A letter from Mrs. Mary A. Latham, of Cambridge, Mass., was read by the secretary, Mr. Latham, and several other ladies of Cambridge have acquainted themselves with the conditions in fire houses and have tried in some ways to make the conditions more pleasant for the firemen. One means of improving the conditions, and one which is greatly appreciated by the firemen, is sending good literature to many of the fire houses.

The report of the commissioners from the association of firemen's $10,000 Relief fund was read by Chief D. S. Hosmer of Lowell. The report was accepted.

Reports of the legislative and pamphlet committees were read by Secretary Burt and Capt. James P. McKissock, of Lowell, respectively, and both were accepted. The meeting then adjourned at 5:30 o'clock until the evening.

Memorial services were held in the evening and an interesting address on "The Introduction in the Legislature of 1911 and Laws Affecting Firemen" was delivered by Capt. James P. McKissock of Lowell. Mr. McKissock's address will be found on another page.

BURIAL IN LOWELL

John P. Devine Was Killed by a Train

While engaged in his duties as car checker in the Salem freight yard Tuesday night, John P. Devine, 135 State street, Danvers, formerly of Lowell, was struck and run over by a shifter engine and killed. This makes the third fatality in Salem on the road within a month. The body was rolled under the locomotive in such a manner as to crush the right leg, cut the body badly in the region of the groin and also disfigured the head and face.

As gleaned from the railroad authorities, Mr. Devine had just left the yard master's shanty with a handful of way bills, and should have been engaged in marking the cars at the time the shifter came along. Checkers held their lanterns in such a manner that they can see both hands and the light can be seen only where it strikes the car. For this reason Engineer Hamilton saw but a flash of light, as of someone boarding the front of the shifter. He saw no more until he thought he felt something under the engine. He at once stopped and not more than 10 feet behind the tender he and other railroad men discovered the mangled body of the car checker.

The fatality occurred at 8:55 o'clock, about 300 feet south of the yard master's shanty, or about opposite the foot of Cypress street in the yard. The shifter was coming slowly in the direction of the depot and with no cars. The engine was in charge of A. Hamilton and the spare yard conductor, George H. Croswell, and the other members of the shifter train crew were on the back of the engine. Had the engine been going fast, the body of Devine might have been tossed to one side, but, going slowly, it was rolled underneath the entire length of the engine and the clothing was torn off the body. The fatality noted, the engine and body were left in their respective positions until the arrival of Medical Examiner Frank S. Atwood, who ordered the body removed to the station, where it was turned over to Undertaker P. W. Murphy.

By the railroad men, Mr. Devine was said to be a very careful man and quite efficient in his position. He had been at work in the local yard about two years, although for several years previous he had worked for the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad in a similar capacity.

Mr. Devine was about 42 years of age and lived at 135 Pine street, Tapleville, Danvers. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Mary (Crowe) Devine, two daughters, Mary and Corretta, and a son, James, and a sister, Della, who lived at his home.

The body will be brought to this city tomorrow noon by Undertaker O'Donnell for burial.

GRISWOLD LOSES

The Jury Finds for the Defendant

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A verdict for the defendant was found today by the jury in the Russell Griswold $50,000 breach of promise suit against Miss Helen Smith of Stamford, Conn.

The jury deliberated eight times. On the first ballot seven of the jurors thought that Griswold had failed to establish his contention and five thought that he was entitled to damages from Miss Smith. On the fifth, sixth and seventh ballots the recipients of the Russell Lamb letters had but two supporters. The eighth found the twelve men agreed.

MR. FRED LAKIN

Given a Tin Shower at Bon Marche

Of course one knows how the Bon Marche employees do things, but out of the ordinary was their stunt last evening when at 6 o'clock at closing time they surprised one of their number, Mr. Fred Lakin of the linen department by giving him a "tin shower." Weather not permitting the affair to take place on Kirk street as was planned, the shoe department was made the rendezvous and "Lucky Lake" was completely overcome with surprise and tins of all descriptions. After thanking all present, a team was chartered and the goods delivered at his home.

Mr. Lakin is to be married Wednesday, Oct. 25, to Miss Harriett Eldridge, of Malden, Mass. All join in wishing both bright and joyful prospects for the future. Those having charge of affair were: Miss Margaret Murray, Miss Eva Suprenant, Mr. P. Duval and M. J. Cossetta.

ITALIAN LOSSES

IN NIGHTLY SKIRMISHES SAID TO BE CONSIDERABLE

BERLIN, Oct. 19.—Edward Myrand, an experienced correspondent of the Zeigling Am Mittag, calling his paper from Tunis and a point where he escapes the Italian censorship, says that the Italian losses in nightly skirmishes in Tripoli are considerable and that the Italians' assertions that the Turk and Arab forces are discouraged and intend to surrender are pure humbug.

Cholera has claimed many victims among the Italian troops and the residents of Tripoli.

Myrand adds that 20,000 Italian troops have been landed on the Tripolitan coast, that their organization is excellent, though the soldiers complain that their clothes and equipment are too heavy, and that there is no thought of an advance into the interior before the present army has been reinforced.

$40,000 GIFTS TO CHOATES

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 19.—The most valuable gift of the Adams Express company was the golden wedding gifts received on Sunday and Monday by Mr. and Mrs. Choate. They represented a total of $40,000.

Big cases with iron bands were received at the express office at noon yesterday in charge of a New York detective. They were consigned to a safe deposit vault in New York. Word was wired ahead to have a special guarded wagon meet the train at the express car terminal. The officer rode in the car with the cages to protect them.

HELD SMOKE TALK

Members of Div. 8, A. O. H., Had Great Time

The members of Division 8, A. O. H., expected to have as their guests last night at their smoke talk State President John J. Dillon and County President Harold of Waltham. Both officers were unable to be present but nevertheless a fine program was carried out and the members enjoyed an evening of rare entertainment. The hall was crowded when President Daniel P. Kelly called to order and introduced as the presiding officer of the evening Charles L. Marren, a prominent member of the division. Mr. Marren proved an able presiding officer and his introduction of the different speakers was greatly appreciated by his fellow-members. Mayor Michael James F. Mistella, James O'Sullivan, James E. O'Donnell, Edward Slattery, Alderman Connors, Chairman Gallagher of the board of aldermen, and John W. McEvoy spoke, and their remarks were applauded. James E. Donnelly and Charles Carey entertained with vocal selections and an orchestra rendered several numbers. The occasion was one of the most enjoyable ever conducted by the division and particularly pleasing was the presence of so many of the older members. The speaking was the great feature of the evening and the remarks of those who spoke aroused great enthusiasm among the members. Division 8 is one of the most progressive divisions of the order in this city and under the presidency of Mr. Kelly has increased its membership and its financial standing. President Kelly has an able aid in his work in former President John Rourke, who for several years occupied the chair.

A LINEN SHOWER

Miss Gormley Surprised by Her Friends

Returning to her home at 16 Crane's avenue after attending church on Tuesday evening, Miss Lena Gormley, a popular young lady of St. Patrick's parish, was taken by surprise when, on entering her home, she was surrounded by about thirty of her girl friends and showered with linen. Almost every piece of goods used about a home in the manufacture of which that fabric is the principal element was crammed into an immense basket which was placed near the door. From this receptacle the different pieces of linen were taken by the donors, and, with laughter and pleasurable excitement, pelled good naturedly at the bewildered young hostess.

After this part of the merry making had come to an end the girls gathered about the piano in the parlor and the musical portion of the festivities, not the least enjoyable feature of the evening, was begun. Songs, popular and classical, were rendered by several of the girls of pleasing voices and from the enthusiasm of the auditors the pleasing melodies were thoroughly enjoyed. Among those contributing were Miss Florence McManus and Miss Mary Shea. Miss Gertrude Finnegan and Miss Mary Riley were the accompanists on the piano and at the conclusion of the singing they entertained their friends with many pleasing piano solos.

After these social diversions had been indulged in to the pleasure of all the happy event was brought to a close with a tasteful luncheon. Then, at a late hour, the party came to a close, all vowing it one of the pleasantest gatherings at which they had ever had the good fortune to be present.

Those in charge of the affair were Miss Elizabeth Riley and Miss Josephine Gormley.

BETTER CAR SERVICE

Hearing by R. R. Commission for Lowell and Tewksbury Petitions

The petition of the patrons of the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State Street Railway Co. for better service has resulted in the board of railroad commissioners granting the petitioners a hearing to be held at the office of the railroad commissioners at 20 Beacon street, in Boston, on Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Lawyer Melvin G. Rogers of this city, who is legal representative for the petitioners, received the following letter from the railroad commissioners this morning:

Boston, Oct. 18, 1911.

Melvin G. Rogers, Esq., 49 Hildreth Bldg., Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: Upon the petition of Ralph T. Leith and others relative to service on the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State street railway, the board will give a hearing at its office, 20 Beacon street, Boston, on Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1911, at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon.

Very truly yours,

Charles E. Mann,
Clerk of the Board.

There are six requests in the petition, one of the principal ones being the second, which provides that the so-called Boston cars which leave Merrimack square at 5.15, 5.45 and 6.15 p. m. for Tewksbury be run without stop to

Oakland square (corner of Rogers and Boylston streets) except to take on passengers. In speaking with one of the petitioners the reporter learned that people who could take an Andover street or Oaklands car crowd onto the already packed Boston car and on many occasions people who live away out Rogers street or in Tewksbury have to wait half an hour for another car. Springfield some of the cars running to the suburban towns are marked "Limited" and will not stop to "drop" passengers until a certain point is reached.

The petition is as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Middlesex, ss.

Board of Railroad Commissioners.

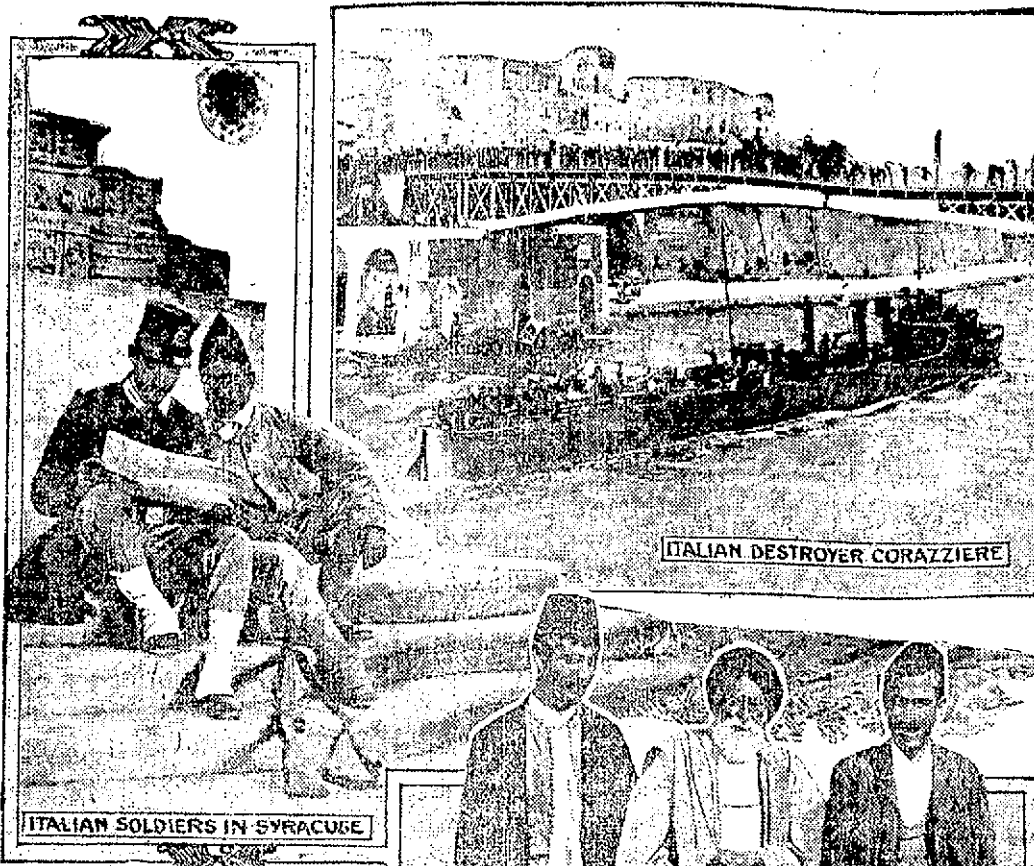

Petition of Ralph T. Leith and others in the matter of the service of the Bay State Street Railway company.

To the Honorable Board of Railroad Commissioners, Boston, Mass.,

Tewksbury, Mass., Oct. 7, 1911.

The undersigned, patrons of the Lowell-Tewksbury line of the Bay State Street Railway company, respectfully petition your honorable board to make the following orders in regard to the service and transfer

REFUGEES FROM TRIPOLI MET PRIVATIONS AFTER THEY HAD FLED TO OTHER CITIES

SYRACUSE, Sicily, Oct. 19.—When Italy prepared to bombard Tripoli the residents of that city hurried away in every possible direction. Hundreds went to Malta, while other hundreds came to this city. There were so many of them that it was impossible to provide shelter for them. They were allowed 2 francs (40 cents) daily to buy food until they could be sent back to Tripoli. These payments were made at the police station. The picture shows a group of refugees just after they had received their allowance. These refugees were of all nationalities—German, Italian, Turkish, etc. No distinction was made, and all received the same amount. Another picture shows the Italian destroyer Corazziere, which took part in the operations at Prevesa. So many Italian soldiers were sent here that the barracks could not accommodate them, and many slept in churches and doorways.

regulations of the Bay State Street Railway company.

(1) That the earliest workingmen's car from Tewksbury to Lowell in the morning be run to Foster's corner instead of the Foster's corner as at present.

(2) That the cars scheduled to leave Merrimack square, Lowell at 5.15 p. m., 5.45 p. m. and 6.15 p. m. for Tewksbury be run without stop to Oakland Square, Lowell (corner of Rogers and Boylston streets) except to take on passengers.

(3) That on Saturday evenings two cars be run from Lowell to Tewksbury up to and including the trip from Lowell scheduled to start at 9.45 p. m. on each trip.

(4) That transfers from Merrimack Square be issued, during the hours when workingmen's transfers are now issued, to all passengers paying regular fare and boarding the cars between Chandler street and Lowell instead of only to passengers boarding the cars between Tewksbury Centre and Lowell as at present.

(5) That transfers from Merrimack Square be issued, during the hours when workingmen's transfers are now issued, to all passengers boarding the cars in Tewksbury at Foster's corner or between Foster's corner and Chandler street, who have paid a five cent fare to Chandler street and pay a five cent fare from Chandler street to Lowell.

(6) That a semi-convertible car or a car of equal capacity be run through Merrimack Square, Lowell to Tewksbury on the trip scheduled to begin at 6.15 p. m.

THE OPPONENTS OF TOBACCO TRUST PLAN ARE BECOMING ACTIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Although the United States court will not hear objections to the American Tobacco Co.'s plan of reorganization until Oct. 30th, the opponents of this plan are holding conferences every day and arranging to present a united front. In financial circles the determination of the legal departments of Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina to protest against the impending plan is the most important development in the controversy. The attorneys general of these states, which constitute the "brought" tobacco belt, centered recently as to the form of this protest.

The position of Attorney General Wickersham has not yet been announced and the stand he may take is the most interesting point to be revealed at the coming hearing. The tobacco traders meet here this afternoon to discuss the situation.

INDUSTRY COUNCIL TO BE VISITED BY A GRAND OFFICER

The regular meeting of Industry council, Royal Arcanum, was held last night and in spite of the inclement weather there was a large attendance of members. The early part of the meeting was devoted to the transaction of routine business after which an entertainment program was carried out. It was expected that James F. Wise, grand vice regent of Massachusetts, would speak, but it was found that it was impossible at the last moment. Mr. Wise will visit the council at a future date. It was announced that on the first Wednesday in November, Grand Regent Sweet would visit the council and give a short address. A collation will be served, and all members are invited to attend.

EX-PRES. LABERGE

CALLS MEETING OF CREDIT FOUNDER CANADIAN STOCKHOLDERS

Ex-President Arthur Laberge of the Credit Foncier Canadien, who on Oct. 7th at a largely attended meeting of the stockholders of the company was ousted out of office for having taken an active part in the defeat of Premier Laurier in Canada, has called a meeting of the stockholders for Oct. 23, the said meeting to be held at Providence, R. I.

The 50 or more Lowell stockholders were notified of the meeting, the purpose of which is, according to the plans drawn by Mr. Laberge, to do away with the entire board of officers and elect new ones. His charges, being mostly against the president, Joseph F. Brochu, Mr. Arthur Laviole of Lowell is a member of the board of officers, being one of the directors.

Mr. Laviole when seen by a reporter of The Sun this morning smiled when asked about the meeting and said he does not believe the attendance will be very large, and he also stated he did not care whether he was ousted out of office or not, but he was sure there would not be any changes.

MISS PENDLETON

Inaugurated President of Wellesley College

WELLESLEY, Oct. 19.—Wellesley college inaugurated a new president, Miss Ellen Fitz Pendleton, today in the presence of a notable throng of educators and with ceremonies that combined simplicity, dignity and impressiveness. Undergraduates and alumnae joined with faculty members, the heads of the college and the hosts of educators present in honoring the new president, who has spent the greater part of her life at Wellesley as student and teacher.

The inaugural exercises were held at the chapel at 11 o'clock. Shortly before that time the academic procession was formed in front of College Hall.

The invited guests included 119 representatives of 88 educational institutions. Prominent among them were Prof. Francis G. Allison of Brown university, representing the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr. of Yale university, President of Wellesley college, Prof. James F. Colby and Gordon Hall, Dartmouth, Prof. Henry Johnson, Bowdoin college, President George Harris of Amherst college, President Mary Woolley of Mount Holyoke college, President Richard C. MacLaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Dean Francis Stoddard, New York university, President Stanthorpe of Wesleyan university, President King of Oberlin college, President Taylor Vassar college, President Chase of Bates college, Dean James Stevens, University of Maine, President Murlin of Boston university, President Burton of Smith college, President LeBaron Briggs of Radcliffe college.

In welcoming the new president, President Capen of the board of trustees said:

"There are few positions in the world greater in influence and opportunity than that of leadership in a great college like this. Here are gathered from all over the land and sometimes from across the ocean the young women that are to be the leaders of the future, the moulders and controllers of the nation; here are the future home builders and teachers of our schools.

"To this position of high trust to which you, Miss Pendleton, have been so enthusiastically called we commit the interest of our beloved Wellesley."

Then followed the hymn "O, God, our Father in heaven," at the conclusion of which Miss Angie Chapin, professor of Greek language and literature and acting dean of the college, spoke in behalf of the Wellesley faculty.

Addresses followed by Mrs. Francis Scudder Williams of Glastonbury, Conn., in behalf of the alumnae, and Miss Anna Bingham, president of the student government association in behalf of the students.

The hymn "Who trusts in God" was next sung by the congregation, after which President Pendleton delivered her inaugural address.

The ceremonies ended with the singing of the Wellesley "Alma Mater" and the benediction by Bishop Lawrence.

The procession was preceded by a band.

The sun was hidden behind a thick bank of gray clouds but the gaily colored doctors' hoods worn by many of the educators and the bright hues of the autumn leaves in the college yard made up in part for the absence of the sunshine. On either side of the walk were lined the students of the college. Eighteen marshals chosen from alumnae graduating from Wellesley since 1879 were in charge of the procession. Mrs. Ada Wing Mead, '85, being the chief marshal.

The procession entered Memorial chapel at 11 o'clock. The invocation was pronounced by Bishop Lawrence of Boston and then followed the induction of the new president into office, this ceremony being performed by Dr. Capen and Mrs. Durant.

Best music, No. Chelmsford, Fri. eve.

BABY'S SKIN RAW AND SORE

The result of even a little neglect in caring for a baby is shown by a letter from Miss J. P. Young, a trained nurse of Salem, Mass. She was called to see a baby where a simple chafing had been neglected. "The skin was raw and sore," she says, "but in a week after using Comfort Powder it was all healed." This powder is no more like the common toilet powders than cream is like skim milk. They are irritating. Comfort Powder soothes and heals irritations and rashes quickly and is harmless. See that E. army? A generation ago when industrial conditions and life were much simpler and more leisurely, the training of boys was adequately met by the apprenticeship system. "To show the extent of specialization let us follow the history of the ordinary operative. A boy or a girl who applies for a position at a mill is given some work at a machine or in some part of the shop or mill. He works on this machine or does his kind of work day in and day out. The division of labor is carried out to such an extent that the work is merely an operation. As the result of performing this operation day after day it becomes a habit, and he does it without mental effort. He begins the work and leaves at the stroke of the bell, when the machinery moves and stops, and really becomes a part of the machine.

If an ambitious boy—and there are a great many of them inside the mill gates—has a natural curiosity for information about the processes that precede or follow his own operation, the machine he tends, or the power that drives the machine, or the simple ordinary calculations used in figuring speeds, drafts, etc., he has little opportunity to see, and if he asks about what little he sees the secondhand or older workers will tell him to "find out the same way they did." The whole atmosphere around the mill is to stifle the propensity of young people to know. If the boy desires to change to another department in order to learn the different processes, the overseer will refuse him because he is most useful in his present position.

The outcome of the boy spending the best part of his life, from fourteen to twenty years of age, doing this work which requires little thinking after the first few days, and no systematic training outside of the mill as a part time system would give, he is apt to lose the power of initiative and the habit of thinking he so often used in his school-days, and loses interest in his work, and knows less than when he left school. It is clear to one it is difficult to get a thorough knowledge of any branch in the mill under the present organization. This organization has come to stay.

Different Problem

Then again, the textile industry of Lowell and the New England communities are facing a different problem in the matter of labor. Each year the old English speaking help is passing out of the mills, and foreigners fresh from European shores, are filling up the rank of mill workers. They are not able to perform their duties in the mills solely through their lack of knowledge of mill conditions, and our language. A great many accidents take place on account of the inability of the overagers and second hands to convey their orders to the non-English speaking operatives, and to lack of knowledge of machines.

There can be no question but that there is a widespread feeling in this city among the mill agents, operatives, social workers, etc., that there is a sort of training needed that our textile school, high school and technical institute do not supply and that is the training of boys and girls during the daytime, and men and women of ordinary intelligence how to work efficiently, that they may be able, not only to earn a living, but to do the work that needs to be done.

The training that is needed is a substitute for the old apprenticeship system, which has died out. The industrial school aims to provide this education in three ways: First—To offer children who have reached the age limit of compulsory education in the grades a further education which aims to prepare them to go into some form of industrial occupation as the high schools prepare them for professional work, or the commercial schools for that work of business technically known as distribution.

Second—To offer to them who are already to work an opportunity for further study which will aid them to become more efficient workers, and aid them in advancing in their line of occupation.

Third—To offer young men already employed, part time instruction in which the employer gives the time out of the working day.

The day school for boys gives preliminary training for boys in the following trades: Carpenter, architect, draftsman, cabinet maker, machinist, mechanical draftsman, electrician, engineer and automobile repairing.

The day school for girls is organized for the training of girls for life activities and duties: to give them a training in the branches of knowledge and the trades that are most useful in gaining a livelihood. To meet these requirements, the industrial school offers courses in housekeeping, dress-making, and power machine work.

In addition to trade training every boy and girl will receive a good academic education. Leaving out the languages it is proposed to give as good an education at the industrial school as he or she can get at the High School.

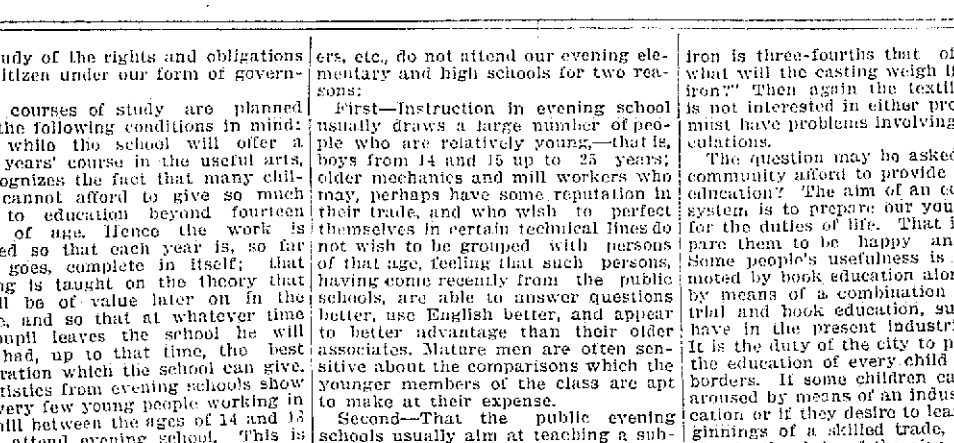

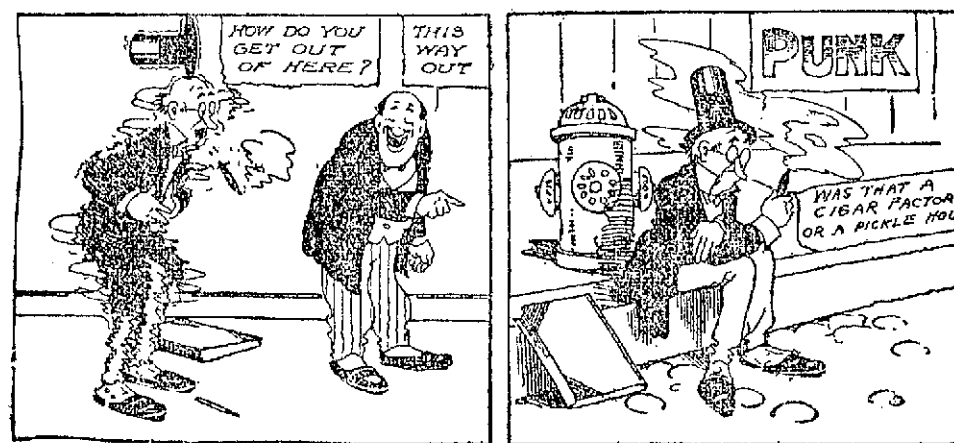

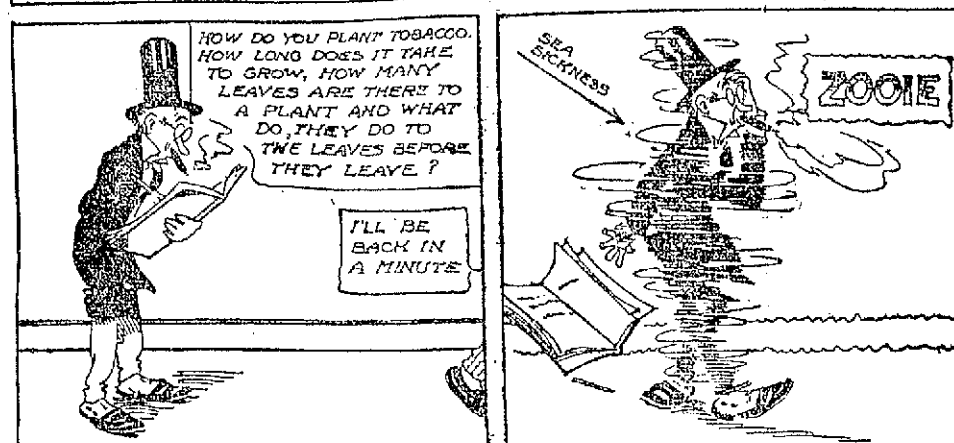

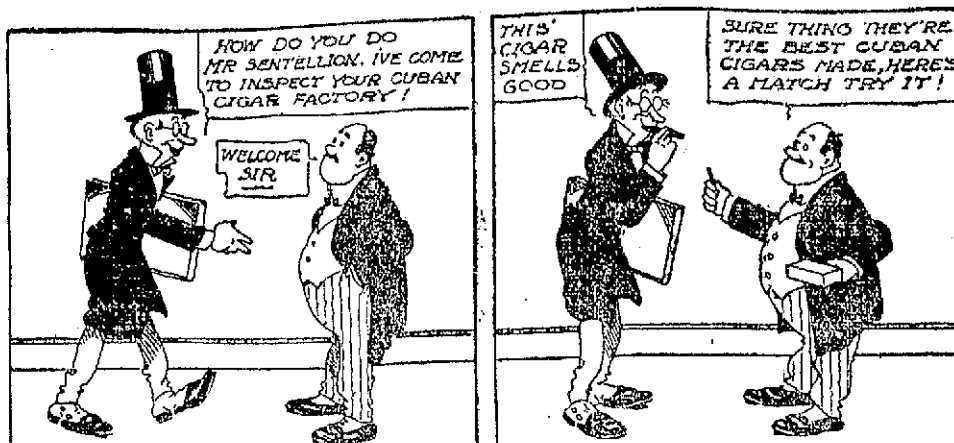

Teaching of English

The aim of teaching English in this school is to teach each boy to speak and write the language with clearness, accuracy and conciseness, especially in relation to the affairs of everyday life. The material used for practice in this work will be taken from the experiences of the pupil in the shops, and in their out-of-school life. A portion of the work will deal with the proper use of technical terms, descriptions of machines, apparatus, etc., and in the latter portions of the course pupils will be required to visit various mechanical plants of which he is to make a written description and to report other events which mark up his interest. Special efforts will be given to cultivate the reading of good books.

Industrial History—Civics—Citizenship—A brief review of the past from the standpoint of the relation of the industrial producer to the general community, together with some detailed study of the development of the industrial arts as civilization has progressed.

The civics will deal in general, with the study of the rights and obligations of a citizen under our form of government.

The courses of study are planned with the following conditions in mind: That while the school will offer a three years' course in the useful arts, it recognizes the fact that many children cannot afford to give so much time to education beyond fourteen years of age. Hence the work is planned so that each year is, so far as it goes, complete in itself; that nothing is taught on the theory that it will be of value later on in the course, and so that at whatever time the pupil leaves the school he will have had, up to that time, the best preparation which the school can give. Statistics from evening schools show that very few young people working in the mill between the ages of 14 and 18 years attend evening school. This is not surprising. They are tired after a hard day's work and can only be aroused by play and naturally seek companions of boys of their own age on the street corner, gymnasium, etc. The course of study of an evening school is not such as to attract interest and recreate tired children. Their eyes wearied with long labor in the day can not endure the fatigue of much book study by night. Physicians have confirmed this experience by stating that growing children working days should play after supper and retire early.

Continuation Classes

In order to meet educational need part time or continuation school classes are to be established so that boys between the ages of 14 and 17 may leave the mill one morning and one afternoon during the week and receive instruction in English, History, Civics, Mill Arithmetic and Mill Practice. In this way the instructor of the children who have to leave the regular day school at a tender age will be continued, and at the same time help them to apply this knowledge to their everyday life.

The department of Industrial Evening School work is devoted to the education of the adult operative. Education adapted to meet the daily needs of the industrial worker is coming to be as important as the education of the child.

We should bear in mind that the average length of a boy's school life until recently was only about four years and that was before he was 12 years old. Then again we are not sure that he received this amount of education, as no systematic method was adopted until recently to keep the boy at school. Consequently these boys who are now the industrial workers have received little if any more education than that obtained during those four years.

There is accordingly a large demand growing out of everyday needs for educational opportunities not afforded by our splendid textile school or the other evening schools. A demand made by those deficient in early education who are desirous of making up this deficiency and by non-English operatives.

The question may be asked why the operatives do not attend our elementary evening schools and receive a thorough foundation in academic branches equivalent to a grammar school and then enroll in the evening Textile school. In this way avoiding duplicate school equipment. Investigations of the Massachusetts board of education have shown that mechanics, mill workers, etc., do not attend our evening elementary and high schools for two reasons:

First—Instruction in evening school usually draws a large number of people who are relatively young—that is, boys from 14 and up to 25 years, older mechanics and mill workers who may, perhaps have some reputation in their trade, and who wish to perfect themselves in certain technical lines do not wish to be grouped with persons of that age, feeling that such persons, having come recently from the mills, are able to answer questions better, use English better, and appear to better advantage than their older associates. Mature men are often sensitive about the comparisons which the younger members of the class are apt to make at their expense.

Second—That the public evening schools usually aim at teaching a subject quite systematically and methodically (possibly too much so) after the day schools. Men have intensely practical aims when they come to an evening school and are unwilling to study systematically an entire subject; they demand that the instruction shall lead directly to the specific things which they want to know. If they are not able to meet this demand they are obliged to spend a month or more on preliminary work, the value of which they do not immediately discover, they will not attend.

The Evening School

Every worker attends evening school to satisfy a definite need. Hence evening school instruction must appeal at once. The teacher must offer an incentive during the first lessons in order to hold the student, and that first lesson shall be the most interesting, presenting the practical part so that the student will leave the class having gained some information about his daily work. For example, a young man who has received a reprimand from his foreman or his overseer because he cannot read a working drawing with sufficient skill to do properly his daily work, enrolls in a drafting school to meet that deficiency and finds that the first two lessons are concerned with lettering plates, the next three with drawing straight and curved lines and the handling of instruments, and that the remainder of the term is to be spent on the projection of points, lines, surfaces and solids. During the time he is receiving at his daily work the same reprimands and is therefore debating in his own mind the value of the evening instruction. It is undoubtedly true that the drawing course I have outlined affords an opportunity for draftsman to learn mechanical drawing, but the average apprentice draftsman does not see the direct application of this instruction to his work. He enrolls for a definite purpose. To be sure it was a narrow one, but it had economic value to him. It would have been possible to give in the evening some elementary instruction in the reading of simple drawings: to teach him in two lessons where to look for the dimensions denoting length, breadth, and thickness; to have shown the principles of simple drawings and to have him comprehend the laying out of holes for drilling. Instead of leaving school at the end of the fifth lesson with no instruction which applied to his work he would have received in the drafting room to receive the more definite and thorough instruction in the theory of mechanical drawing such as must be gained if one is fully to comprehend and cover the entire subject.

The instruction in the various branches must be adapted to the needs of the various occupations. The terms used in the class room must be of the shop, mill, and office. What is three-fourths of 37½ does not appeal so much to a clerk as the problem, "What will three-fourths of a yard of cloth cost at 37½¢? On the other hand, the latter problem does not awaken the interest of the mechanic as much as the problem involving the same operations which reads, "If a copper casting weighs 37½ lbs. and specific gravity of iron is three-fourths that of copper, what will the casting weigh if made of iron?" Then again the textile worker is not interested in either problem. He must have problems involving mill calculations.

The question may be asked, can the community afford to provide industrial education? The aim of an educational system is to prepare our young people for the duties of life. That is, to prepare them to be happy and to prosper. Some people's usefulness is best promoted by book education alone. Others, by means of a combination of industrial and book education, such as we have in the present industrial school. It is the duty of the city to provide for the education of every child within its borders. If some children can only be aroused by means of an industrial education or if they desire to learn the beginnings of a skilled trade, then it is clearly the duty of the city to provide it.

The state and locality will derive revenue from industrial educational education, indirectly, through the increased producing power of the population and the increased amount of wealth available for taxes. It has been estimated that industrial education would in a course of a generation increase the amount of national revenue by 100 per cent.

The city of Lowell produces practically no raw material. All the coal, iron, wood, leather, cotton and wool must be imported and brought into the city and wrought into the finished products through the skill of her citizens. You might say that the city of Lowell is today dependent for its very existence on the mills, shops and factories.

It is the aim of your board of trade to place Lowell among the prosperous communities and to grow in prosperity so that the workers may find work and employers may always find profitable investments for their capital. In order to do this the city must take the lead in producing the finest and highest grade of goods. Such goods can be produced only by the best workman working under favorable conditions. Superior workmanship and good industrial conditions depend in a large part on industrial education. Industrial education is the chief means of developing man, worker and citizen, adding thereby to the prosperity of the state. Hence the board of trade should look on the industrial school as a valuable asset to the city, ready to change its course of study to meet the educational needs of the people.

To meet this need the school is offering the following evening courses for those already engaged in the trade: Machine shop, carpentry, automobile repairing, blue print, reading and shop arithmetic, electricity, plumbing, steam engineering for firemen, steam engineering for engineers. For women: housekeeping, millinery and dressmaking. Later textile classes will be established in picker and card room practice, ring spinning, and mule spinning.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Awakened by the presence of a man in his room who was apparently riding his trousers pockets, Charles C. Coombs, a retired police officer of 11 Grape street, Malden, jumped from his bed and confronted his son, William S. Coombs, 24 years old, who had been ordered out of the house and disowned by his father over two years ago. The father gave chase in his night clothes, but the young man escaped. Mr. Coombs told his story in court yesterday when his son pleaded not guilty to the charges of breaking and entering and larceny. Judge Bruce held the young man in $2000 for the grand jury.
